93rd YEAR, No. 250 ★★ VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, TUESDAY, APRIL 5, 1977 15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

TEMPERATURE RECORDS FALL IN B.C.

April sunshine set temperature records around B.C. Monday.

Lytton had 25 degrees Celsius and was the hottest spot in Canada while Revelstoke had a high of 20 and Prince George and Fort St. John recorded highs of 19 degrees.

In Victoria, the high was 13.7 at the airport and 14.2 at Gonzales, well below the previous record of 19.4 set on April 4, 1966.

Today's Victoria high could hit the 19-degree mark, the weatherman said, because of a ridge of high pressure settled over the coast.

Things should cool down a bit by Friday with overcast and possibly some showers a that time.

No Deal For Quebec —Poll

TORONTO (CP) — Most Canadians who responded to a readers' survey by The Canadian magazine are opposed to negotiating special political and economic agreements with Quebec in an attempt to prevent separation, the weekly publication says.

Most of the 102,152 Canadians who responded also are opposed to promoting and financing more bilingualism programs across the country in an attempt to prevent separation, say results to be published in the April 29 edition.

The magazine, distributed to about two million readers through weekend editions of newspapers, asked readers Jan. 15 to fill in a six-part questionnaire and mail it to the magazine.

The magazine expected about 30,000 replies and says it was overwhelmed by the response. About 3,000 readers also sent letters with additional comments on the poll.

The magazine says its poll is not a scientific sampling of what Canadians believe because few French-Canadians read The Canadian and it is not distributed in the Atlantic region.

It commissioned a Gallup poll from the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion to ask the same questions as the reader's poll.

Almost 80 per cent of readers who responded opposed Canada negotiating special agreements with Quebec to prevent separation. Gallup poll results had 54.2 per cent of English-speaking respondents opposing negotiations while 66.9 per cent of French-Canadians supported such deals.

Canadians in both surveys were split on the question of whether Canada should hold a national vote on Quebec independence.

Seventy-seven per cent of readers opposed more bilingualism programs, compared with 64.1 per cent of English-Canadians in the Gallup poll. Fifty-six per cent of francophones in the Gallup poll supported more programs.

8-Cent-a-Gallon Boost for Gas?

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is expected to look for a gasoline price increase of up to eight cents a gallon in the annual pricing talks with the provinces that open here Wednesday.

A final decision on the federal position was to be made at a cabinet meeting today, but sources say Ottawa likely will seek a price increase of close to $2 a barrel.

An increase of that amount on the price of crude oil at the wellhead would add about eight cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline or home-heating fuel.

Asked about the price increases Monday, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said he did not want to negotiate in public.

But in speeches this year, the minister has said an increase of at least $1.25 a barrell would be needed just to keep pace with changes in the world price. He also said that an increase of "better than $2" could be imposed without taking the domestic price above U.S. levels.

Sources said Monday the federal position currently leans towards the upper end of that scale, but it will need ratification by the cabinet today before it is presented to the federal-provincial conference.

Federal energy department officials say they expect to see the same breakdown between provinces as to whether prices should increase.

Alberta will argue for a significant move towards world oil prices of more than $13 a barrel.

But Ontario, as it has for the last two years, will argue against large price increases. Provincial Energy Minister James Taylor already has said he feels a price increase will create more unemployment, add to inflation and hurt the country's competitiveness in world markets.

LEICHTENSTEIN . . . ALL'S FINE

VADUZ, Leichtenstein (UPI) — This tiny principality of 23,700 persons and 62 square miles said Monday it is doing all right economically despite troubles elsewhere in the world.

For instance, unemployment dropped in 1976 from 58 to 17 people and the number of partially unemployed declined from 139 to 1, the State Bank said. There were 12 job opportunities.

Gross national product last year totaled $264 million, which meant a per capita income of $10,560.

Not Enough Cash to Cut Jobless

OTTAWA (CP) — The government simply does not have enough money to significantly reduce unemployment across the country, Manpower Minister Bud Cullen said Monday.

Even to reduce the unemployment rate to four or five per cent "would cost literally billions."

Nearly a million Canadians are unemployed.

"Nobody, I am sure, would suggest that these billions should be found by cutting out other federal programs which are so important to our economic and social well being," Cullen said.

Cullen was speaking during Commons debate on the budget presented last week which contained an additional $100 million for make-work programs, bringing the total allocated this year to $458 million.

The government's top priority is to help people find work but "our labor force grows faster than the number of job opportunities the economy is generating." He cited the basic problem as a continual addition of women and young people to the labor market.

"It would indeed be wonderful if we could abolish unemployment with one blow," said Cullen.

Manpower officials plan to approve 3,150 government make-work projects — Canada works and Young Canada works — at a cost of about $110 million during the first stage of the program, which started Monday and ends next March. The total program is expected to create about 77,110 jobs, he said.

Butter Prices Rise 10 Cents

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan announced a new federal policy Monday that will result in an increase for consumers of 10 cents-a-pound for butter and cost taxpayers an additional $200 million in subsidies to farmers.

Whelan said the "modest increase" for butter was justified in order to provide Canda's 80,000 dairymen with a better standard of living.

The new policy, effective last Friday, governs farmers who produce the milk used to make skim milk powder, butter and cheese.

Ottawa will spend a record $477 million to subsidize the dairy industry in 1977-78. The new policy represents a major initiative by the government to bail out the financially-troubled industry.

The announcement was welcomed in the Commons by spokesmen for all parties. The policy is in sharp contrast to last year's when the surplus-burdened farmers were ordered to cut production by 18 per cent.

A debt of $152 million as of March 31, accumulated by the industry due to export losses suffered during the last 12 months, is to be written off by the federal government.

Whelan denied suggestions outside the Commons that cabinet had approved the $200 million increase in an effort to buy back separatist votes in Quebec, where about 60 per cent of the country's total production originates.

But the agriculture minister said political conditions were always a factor when cabinet approved federal spending plans.

"Sometimes you have to face reality," Whelan said.

However, he insisted the subsidies were boosted to assist financially-strapped farmers in all provinces.

Quebec dairymen were among the most vocal opponents of last year's policy and led an unruly Parliament Hill demonstration last June where Whelan was pelted with milk and butter.

Whelan said the new policy will hold the line of total production at 105.6 million hundredweight of industrial milk. And Ottawa will continue to support the dairymen directly with a subsidy of $2.66 a hundred-weight unchanged from last year.

Payment for skim milk powder will rise two cent a pound to 70 cents.

To help offset the export losses, producers of fluid milk, the milk sold on the store shelf, will be assessed a levy of 25 cents a hundredweight. The fluid producers are controlled by the provinces while industrial shippers are regulated by Ottawa.

Plane Crash Kills 68 As Storms Rake South

Times News Services

Savage spring storms battered the U.S. Monday night and early today, spawning tornadoes that virtually wiped out whole communities, claiming 102 lives and unleashing a hailstorm that may have caused an airliner to crash.

Southern Airways DC-9, its jets apparently clogged by violent hail that smashed windows in the plane, glided down onto a two-lane highway, crushing cars and buildings before exploding in a rain of fire, metal and victims.

Sixty-eight persons including four on the ground died and 27 others were injured.

The victims on the ground apparently never knew what hit them.

With its engines deadened in the sudden and fierce hail and lightning storm, the plane crashed on Georgia Highway 92, the main street of the town of 1,400.

Pilot William McKenzie, 54, had tried to land the jet with a wing span of 90 feet on a two-lane road only 22 feet wide.

Local residents who witnessed the crash said the pilot would have made it but for a lone telephone pole standing near a gas station.

McKenzie and his first officer, Lyman Keele, 33, were both reported killed in the crash.

A survivor said the 81 passengers and four crew members were told they were going to crash about four minutes before the plane struck.

"It was an apparently severe thunderstorm . . . The hail really got bad . . . Lightning struck the left wing tip . . . I believe the hail being ingested in the engine is what really brought it down," said Don Foster, a licensed pilot from Decatur, Ala., and a passenger.

National Guardsmen were pressed into flood duty in Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia. Scores of persons were missing in Wise County, Va., but civil defence officials said it was impossible to say how many found refuge from high waters and how many might have drowned.

A tornado killed 21 persons in north Alabama Monday, another twister claimed one life in Georgia, floods killed four persons in Kentucky, four in West Virginia, two in Virginia and one in Tennessee. One traffic death in Tennessee also was blamed on the weather.

Eighteen of the tornado victims died and nearly 100 persons were injured in devastated Smithfield Estates, in the Birmingham, Ala., area.

Gas Pipe Offer To Indians

WASHINGTON (CP) — A confidential U.S. government document presented today to a House of Representatives sub-comittee says the Arctic Gas consortium has offered to "make a settlement" of native claims along the route of a proposed gas pipeline in northern Canada.

The document, a cable from U.S. Ambassador Tom Enders in Ottawa, also quotes the ambassador as saying Canadian government agencies dealing with the pipeline question "are indeed moving very slowly."

Native land claims are under negotiation between the federal government and various native groups who say they will not accept pipeline construction until after their claims are settled.

Harold Runnnels (Dem.—N.M.) presented the cable, which summarizes a Sept. 28 conversation between the U.S. ambassador and two executives of Columbia Gas Transmission Corp., a consortium member.

The cable says: "Meeting ended with discussion of Arctic Gas offer to make a settlement of native claims along pipeline route. Ambassador Clarke and Orlofsky concluded that although this is a necessary and helpful gesture it would not by itself resolve the difficult claims issue.

The two executives were B. J. Clarke, senior vice-president of Columbia, and Cy Orlofsky, whose title was not given.

There were no other details of the "Arctic Gas Offer."

Runnels said it should be made known whether U.S. gas consumers will ultimately pay what could be a huge cost of the possible settlement of Canadian land claims.

Quebec Moving Backwards: PM

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he hopes the Quebec government will change some of the proposals suggested in a policy paper on the use of French and English in the province.

Trudeau said in the Commons that he agrees with a suggestion by Opposition leader Joe Clark that the proposed legislation, which grants supremacy to the French language, challenges the federal Official Languages Act, which places English and French on an equal level.

Trudeau said he feared the Quebec government is taking "retrogressive" rather than progressive" steps in the cultural development of Quebec.

While the prime minister said he sympathized with the desires of the Quebec government to stimulate the cultural growth of Quebecers, he did not want the provincial government to create a unilingual French Quebec with a unilingual English Canada the spin-off.

Trudeau said he did not plan to give a formal address to Parliament on the Quebec policy paper, although he is willing to answer questions on it and cabinet ministers were free to comment.

He emphasized that the paper was prepared for discussion and that it could be changed before being made law.

Rent-Curb Phase-Out Hint

Rent controls will probably be phased out on all but low-cost housing by the year's end, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Monday.

Mair said the government hopes to withdraw its controls when the law of supply and demand begins to effectively hold rent increases down.

"When the vacancy rate permits, we hope to de-control," said the minister.

Last week the government announced that the maximum rent increase ceiling will be lowered to seven per cent from 10.6 per cent on May 1.

Mair said that a decision on rent controls would come from the cabinet only after further study of the situation, but he expected the controls will become unnecessary as vacancy rates rise, driving rents down.

The minister added, however, that the controls could remain in place on low-cost rental housing where the supply is less than the demand.

2,4-D Use Approved in Okanagan Lake

The provincial government is going to go ahead with the use of the controversial herbicide 2,4-D to control Eurasian Water Milfoil in the Okanagan Lake system.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Monday that the use of the chemical herbicide is recommended in a report by a special three-man committee set up to study the weed contamination problem.

Nielsen tabled the report in the legislature Monday, and said its recommendations would form the basis for the provincial program to control the weed.

The minister told a news conference the weed control program will be launched in 1977 using four methods of control — mechanical, hydraulic, biological and chemical.

He said a full scale integrated control plan would be in operation by 1978, lasting until 1980.

Bob Langford, fresh water biologist and consultant for Saanich, the Capital region and the federal government, said today it is not the Eurasian Water Milfoil which is causing weed problems in local lakes but two or three natural varieties.

The milfoil "spreads like wildfire" and would make "an awful damn mess" if it turned up in lakes here, he said.

Although the herbicide 2,4-D is "controversial," Langford said he does not know enough about it to call it dangerous. He said he thinks it may be warranted because of the onslought of the milfoil in the Okanagan.

Nielsen said that after the three full years of control, if the problem is not contained, a complete reassessment of the scheme would be in order.

The report containing the recommendations was the second given Nielsen by the committee, which was set up by the minister in October, 1976.

The first report, tabled in early February, dealt with preventative and mechanical methods of controlling milfoil.

Nielsen said the final report is not yet ready and will contain no new recommendations, being just a compilation of the first two.

In the report tabled Monday, the committee said it could find no evidence of adverse long-term effects from the use of recommended dosages of herbicides over fairly long periods of time when used in water.

He said the implementation in any particular area would involve consultation with local authorities through the Okanagan Basin Water Board.

The minister stressed that the commissioners said they could see no need to take even a remote risk if the desired objective is not achieved in a relatively short time, and that was the reason for the 1980 time limit.

The committee states that "if no immediate effort is made to control the weeds, the committee feels that the chances of success of any large scale program will be seriously eroded."

Besides recommending the use of 2,4-D along with the possibility of other chemical herbicides including Reglone A and Gramoone S, the committee suggests two biological control programs.

The committee says that a type of European moth has an aquatic larvae stage that would feed on milfoil but when the moth matured it would die because of cold weather.

The report says that "consideration should be given to the use of this moth on an experimental basis in the Okanagan Lake system."

But Nielsen said he is hesitant to introduce a biological agent into the area because "we don't want to replace a weed problem with an insect problem."

The committee also suggests that a plant-eating carp could be introduced into the lake system, but such a measure should merely be considered for the time being.

Syria Backs PLO in Surprise Move

By STUART AUERBACH
Washington Post

BEIRUT — Syrian forces entered the fighting near Lebanon's southern border with Israel for the first time Monday, pounding an Israeli-supported, rightist Christian stronghold with heavy artillery and rocket fire in support of a Palestinian attack, Palestinian and Christian sources here reported.

The surprise Syrian artillery bombardment of Marjayoun carried the possibility of countermeasures by Israel, which has warned against any Syrian intrusion into southern Lebanon.

The Syrian action follows the model set in southern Lebanon by Israel, which for more than six months has been supplying equipment, logistical support and sometimes artillery cover for rightist Christians who have gained control over a string of tiny villages along the border with Israel. The Israeli action was an attempt to give Israel a narrow buffer zone against Palestinian attacks.

In a fierce midnight-to-dawn battle, the Palestinian forces — reinforced over the weekend with fresh troops drawn from camps near Beirut — recaptured the key crossroads village of Taibe, three miles from the Israeli border.

The co-ordinated Palestinian-Syrian attack on Christian strongpoints followed a secret meeting Sunday between Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat; Zuhair Mohsen, chief of the Syrian-backed Palestinian organization Saiqa, and Naji Jamil, head of the Syrian air force and a close confidant of Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Sources here said the Syrian-backed PLO offensive was planned during the meeting, held in the southern Lebanese town of Nabatiyet in late February. Israel raised a major diplomatic furor that forced the withdrawal of 600 Syrian troops and 10 tanks sent to Nabatiyet to control Palestinian heavy artillery that could have bombarded Israel.

Monday's co-ordinated drive publicly signalled the end to a major rift between the PLO, and the Syrians, who as recently as February had ringed Palestinian camps in Beirut with ranks and fought pitched battles with extremist factions of the Palestinian movement.

With the extremists tamed and the mainstream PLO bowing to Syria's will, the two forces are again co-operating.

CREWS STAY OUT

LONDON (Reuter) — An ultimatum by British Airways to 4,000 striking ground staff at Heathrow airport to return to work failed today.

The unofficial dispute by the maintenance engineers has caused the state-owned airline to cancel all Eruopean and domestic flights as well as some inter-continental services and brought chaos to the airport.

Passengers have been transferred to other carriers where possible but thousands are stranded.

The men are refusing night work and overtime because of a dispute over shift pay and separate bargaining rights.

British Airways sent telegrams Monday to the engineers instructing them to report for their appropriate shifts after 1 p.m. today.

"Failure to do so constitutes a breach of contract and you will be dismissed," the telegrams said. "If you are subsequently re-engaged it will be as a new entrant with consequent loss of benefits."

only children who may attend an English-language school are those with at least one parent who attended an English-language Quebec school or are already enrolled in an English-language school in the province.

The paper also proposes the use of less English in business and the courts.

Trudeau said about 99 per cent of the White Paper proposals may be permissible under the federal constitution.

Trudeau said however, federal legal experts are unable to make a final judgment on constitutionality until the Parti Quebecois government makes public its proposed language legislation.

Hal Herbert, Liberal MP for the Montreal-area riding of Vaudreuil, tried Monday to have the language policy paper sent to a Commons committee for study to determine whethr it is constitutional. However, his motion did not receive the required unanimous consent of all MPs for it to be debated.

Outside the House, Herbert expressed concern that there may not be enough time to examine the proposed Quebec legislation between the time it is introduced and the time it is passed.

"Quebec doesn't even care if it's unconstitutional," he said.

Justice Minister Ron Basford said officials of his department have looked at the policy paper, but they will not decide on any course of action until they have actual legislation before them.

Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jean Chretien also said it was too early to make a definitive judgment on the economic repercussions of the White Paper.

But he said that if some of its provisions were not changed it would cause serious damage to the Quebec economy.

Anglo-Canadian Scientists Discover Longest Molecule

OTTAWA (CP) — An Anglo-Canadian team of scientists and astronomers has detected the longest the heaviest molecule yet found in interstellar space, the National Research Council (NRC) said Monday.

"The formation of these large molecules in the vast dust and clouds of interstellar space may be an intermediate step between the primary elements in stars and the compounds and molecules found on planets," the NRC said in a statement.

"A knowledge of the process of formation of interstellar molecules is essential for understanding how extremely complex molecules necessary for living organisms have arisen on the earth."

The NRC team of astronomers—Takeshi Oka, N. W. Broten, Lorne Avery and J. M. MacLeod — detected cyanotriacetylene in a dust cloud near the constellation of Taurus.

The microwave frequency of the molecule, necessary for the NRC radio telescope to identify it in space, was based on research done at the University of Sussex in England.

"The existence of such long molecules in space is at first surprising," the NRC said. Scientists assumed the harsh conditions in space — extremely cold temperatures and strong ultraviolet radiation — would break up long strings of atoms such as this molecule.

"But the detection of progressively heavier molecules may force scientists to revise their ideas of how easily nature can manufacture the kinds of heavy molecules necessary for life as we know it."

PERMITS NEEDED

Burning permits will be required for outdoor fires, other than campfires, outside municipal boundaries, as of midnight April 14.

Officials of the B.C. Forest Service protection division said the permits can be obtained free of charge from any of the province's 100 forest ranger stations.

The burning permits cover all industrial fires and outdoor burning of rubbish and other debris.

The forest service may refuse to issue the permits when the hazard is high.

Oil Import Shift Seen By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sources of oil imports to the United States are shifting away from Canada and Venezuela and are being replaced by shipments from Middle Eastern and Nigerian producers, the U.S. Federal Energy Administration (FEA) said Monday.

Shipments from Arab producers have doubled in the last four years, the FEA said, increasing from 1.4 million barrels a day in pre-embargo 1973 to 2.8 million barrels in 1976. At the same time, Nigerian imports have nearly doubled over the same period, growing from 600,000 barrels a day in 1973 to 1.1 millions barrels last year.

Imports from Canada, for example, dropped to 600,000 barrels a day in 1976 compared with 1.3 million barrels a day in 1973 — a 54-per-cent reduction.

Post Office Move Stirs Storm

Victoria moving companies are upset that a small, non-union New Westminster firm was awarded a contract to move the main post office from downtown Victoria to its new site in Saanich.

Ben Aylesworth, president of the Victoria Movers' Association, said he was surprised that the Canadian Brotherhood of Railwty Trtnsport and General Workers, which represents moving company employees, and postal workers' unions, took no action against Briteway Moving and Storage.

Aylesworth said Briteway, which won the contract with a bid of just over $10,000, is a small company that used mostly rental trucks and "didn't even hire Victoria people as laborers."

"Things are tough enough in Victoria," he said.

The Vancouver Better Business Bureau said it has received complaints about Briteway and its owner Brian Douglas, in the past and warned the federal public works department.

Copper-Smelting Incentive Plan

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The Social Credit government Monday introduced a major incentive program of payments up to $500,000 a year for a maximum of 10 years to private companies establishing copper smelters in B.C.

Mines Minister Jim Chabot said he hopes the Copper Smelting and Refining Incentive Act will attract to B.C. a world-scale smelter operation employing about 400-500 directly and hundreds more in spin-off operations.

The payments will be made on the basis of up to five cents per kilogram (2.27 cents per pound) for blister of refined copper produced in a smelter or refinery within the province.

The first payment under the act willl likely be made to Afton Mines Ltd. copper smelter near Kamploops, a small specialized smelter set for production later this year.

Chabot said Afton will get the maximum of $500,000 a year available under the act, but will not get it for the full 10 years.

Negotiations with Afton will determine the number of years the subsidy will be in effect.

The NDP government promised a similar subsidy to Afton once it got into production, Chabot said, but it also wanted a five per cent equity in the operation.

"We are not interested in taking any equity position. That's the difference in philosophies."

The subsidies would not be paid to a company until the smelter is producing.

Chabot said the most romising place for the establishment of a large scale smelter is in the copper-rich Highland Valley between Merritt and Ashcroft.

The minister said he has a letter on his desk from a major copper firm expressing interest in setting up a smelter in the valley.

"It needs to be firmed up, they're interested," he said.

The incentive system should result in two world-scale smelters, he said.

The majority of B.C. copper is shipped in its simple concentrate form to Japan.

Chabot said the act is to encourage the development of an integrated copper industry in B.C. including mining, smelting, refining and fabricating.

"Such an objective will take time to achieve but with the . . . act in place, we are providing solid proof of our dedication to this objective," Chabot said.

Clamps Slated On Car Dealers

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair moved Monday to establish regulations governing the licensing of car dealers and making it easier for his department to investigate complaints.

In introducing Bill 39, the Motor Dealers Licensing Act, to the house, Mair said it would "protect consumers and businesses alike."

The minister said the bill provides "some rough standards by which they (car dealers) will be judged . .. (and makes it) more difficult for unscrupulous and financially irresponsible people to get into or remain in the motor dealer business."

He said that, in part, the act is a response to complaints from motor dealer and trade associations about dishonest dealers holding licences.

Mair said there are about 1,700 dealers in B.C. and all but one or two per cent are reputable.

'Scallywags work for even the most reputable businesses," he added.

Mair noted the act allows his department to investigate any complaints by customers of car dealers, an authority that was lacking before. Previously the department of consumer and corporate affairs could investigate only if there was an offence under the Trade Practices Act.

The bill also establishes that:

A car dealer cannot operate out of a residential dwelling but must have a specific business location.

The registrar of motor dealers has the right to freeze the assets of a dealer and the power to enter his place of business and examine records during an investigation.

Dealers have the right to a hearing when licence suspensions are being considered.

EX-LEADER OF CUBA SHOOTS SELF

Prio, 74, was found by police responding to a call from neighbors. He died a short time later while undergoing surgery in hospital.

"He apparently suffered a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the chest," said police spokesman John Anderson.

Prio was president of Cuba from 1948 to 1952, when he was ousted by Fulgencio Batista. Fidel Castro overthrew Batista's regime in 1959.

Municipalities To Receive $4M More

B.C. municipalities will receive a total of $34 million in grants from the provincial government this year, an increase of $4 million.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis announced Monday that $22.5 million of this amount will be shared among municipalities according to their operating expenditures and census population figures.

Individual municipalities have not yet been informed how much they will receive under the various grant categories, including water assistance and housing start grants.

SADAT SEEKING 'LOTS' OF AID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, strongly urging the Carter administration to admit Palestinians to Middle East peace talks, is turning his attention to winning U.S. arms aid.

Before his arrival Monday in Washington, Sadat said he would ask for "lots" of F-5 fighter planes and for TOW anti-tank missiles. Sadat was to meet today with Defence Secretary Harold Brown.

Sadat also scheduled another discussion with President Carter and was to meet with Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal.

Israeli officials in Jerusalem said Monday they strongly object to the supply of U.S. arms to Egypt, but do not object to economic aid.

The Egyptian president opened his official Washington visit by stressing the need for Palestinian inclusion in the peace negotiations and he hit the theme again and again.

"Their leadership has established their credentials to be part of the peace process," Sadat told Carter at a White House dinner Monday night.

Sadat also praised Carter for publicly endorsing a Palestinian homeland, which would be carved out of territory now held by Israel.

Sadat said Carter's homeland statement, which marked the first time any American president has made reference to giving Palestinians their own land, "was welcomed by every Arab" and was "regarded as a positive signal."

New Wine, Old Bottle

In a long-winded preamble to changes in provincial liquor regulations Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair assures us that almost all the new initiatives are designed to encourage a more moderate approach to alcohol consumption. To wit B.C. wine markups will be reduced from 66 to 46 per cent and the imported wine markups will fall from 117 to 100 per cent. Considering provincial wine prices in general, this small blessing is not going to turn us into moderate wine drinkers overnight, or perhaps even years from now. As for the percentage drops themselves, 20 per cent for domestic wines and 17 per cent for imported wines, they will be eaten up by inflation and the weakening Canadian dollar before most of us pop a cork.

The government is proceeding in the right direction, though it's just that it didn't go far enough. If someone in the private sector put a 100 per cent markup on one of his products he would be laughed out of the marketplace. Since the government has a monopoly on imported wines, it can afford these benign imperial gestures such as lowering the markup a paltry 17 per cent. A 54 per cent differential between provincial and imported wines is not understandable favoritism, it's outright protectionism — the same method used to protect eastern textiles which this administration grumbles about. A 46-71 differential would have been more realistic than the new 46-100 differential. It would also encourage people to try the better French and German wines. Then at least, British Columbians would have some standards by which to judge local efforts. As things stand today, how many people can afford to pay anywhere between $10 and $40 for a single bottle of the better French chateaus? Maybe that's the way the government wants it. How are you going to keep them drinking plong once they've tasted Romanee Conti?

Even with these caveats, however, Rafe Mair deserves credit for making some progress in an area the last two administrations did their best to ignore. Best of all, the minister and his counterpart in the ministry of agriculture, Jim Hewitt, are going to encourage the planting of better quality grapes in the province. While we can't agree with Mair's fatuous statement that some B.C. table wines are the best in the world, provincial soil has the potential of producing some fine wines in future. Still, it is ironic that an administration so slavishly dedicated to free enterprise does not believe in too much competition for provincial wines. If this government allowed free enterprise to reign supreme in wine competition the local industry would probably be producing fine wines now.

While progress has been made in balancing an unfair system, the same cannot be said about the government's attitude towards neighborhood pubs. A private individual who wishes to start a neighborhood pub must now meet seven criteria, including municipal approval and a requirement to circulate a petition to residents within six blocks, obtaining support from 60 per cent of the residents. However, if a hotel beer parlor under 125 seats wishes to convert its premises to a pub it will not need municipal approval, nor will it require a petition of surrounding residents. In one stroke, the government has given established interests a gigantic advantage in establishing neighborhood pubs. It is also interesting that while this administration piously refuses to allow the sale of hard liquor in beer parlors, hotels are now encouraged to hire an interior decorator, rename the beer parlor a pub, and sell both beer and spirits. It would appear the hotel association lobby has got its way with this administration if one examines the fine print.

Other than this flagrant circumvention of stated policies, and the wink at the hotel association, the new liquor policies take B.C. forward. Any initiative to encourage moderate drinking is welcome. And in a province languishing economically, wine-making is a growth industry that might eventually be our most important processed agricultural crop. It is also only right that wineries can now display, sell and offer samples of their product, like any other business. Mair is on the right track here although he has tainted the new wine by adding too much input from the hotel association to his policy vats.

Grandmothers

It can't happen here. In a parliamentary system, he would have lost the confidence of the House of Commons to govern. How much better that we have a separate head of state — the queen — and chief of government. All that and worse drivel was heard this side of the 49th parallel during the tortuous Watergate crisis in the U.S.

So last week at a parliamentary prayer breakfast in Ottawa for MPs and Senators who did the organizers bring in to lead our governors in orison? None other than Charles Colson, a leading actor in the Watergate affair, now a reformed evangelical Christian.

Have we no suitably penitent ex-politicians of our own who could have served? Bad enough we import magazines, television programs, cars, beef and $9 billion in investment capital last year, but prayer breakfast leaders as well? Our own P. A. Gaglardi is eager for work with a national mission.

But perhaps there was more than spiritual sustenance in mind when the politicos asked Colson to come. As a man who (before his enlightenment) once said he'd walk over his grandmother in army boots to help Richard Nixon, he may have offered the government some advice on political strategy. With a budget like last week's, the Liberals have a lot of "grandmothers" to overcome.

RICHARD GWYN

It's a Sellout Budget

OTTAWA — It is tempting to dismiss Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's budget, as opposition politicians already have done, as a slap on the back to business and a slap in the face to the unemployed.

Part of that temptation needs to be resisted. With few other choices available — restraint on government spending, a cash deficit hand-over from last year of $5.4 billion, inflation still needing to be wrestled to the ground — Macdonald, in terms of classic economics, has done pretty much what he ought to have done. He has given private industry, through tax incentives and reductions, some of the tools it needs to get on with the job of getting the economy moving again.

The budget needs to be measured also in human terms. Before 1977 is out, one Canadian in 12, or over 8 per cent of the labor force, will be jobless.

To be unemployed today doesn't mean the same as it meant to be unemployed yesterday. Social security programs and the opportunities for "secondary" wage earners, like wives and children, have removed much of the hardship from joblessness. The costs that remain are the demoralization of the individual and the wasted opportunities for economic growth.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald and PM on budget night.

Demoralized

The question Macdonald didn't address in his budget, indeed didn't even admit existed, was whether, within his small circle of choices, he could have done more for the one million Canadians who now will go through 1977 demoralized and robbed of a chance to contribute their talents to the country.

An answer isn't hard to compose. Macdonald could have done more, easily and painlessly. The reason he didn't illustrates the extent to which budgets these days have become a bookkeeping charade.

Here's the background. In his budget, Macdonald cut personal income taxes by $400 million. For the famed "average" taxpayer, this amounts to a saving of a trivial $100-$200. The political benefit of this gesture, though, is that it protects Macdonald from accusations he has sold out to the corporations (to whom he gave $800 million).

The other way Macdonald could have spent this $400 million would have been to apply it to new, labor-intensive, job-creation programs. Among these possible programs:

• A tax credit, which comes directly off taxes due, for home insulation materials. Homeowners still would pay to have the insulation installed, or would do the work themselves. They would save on home heating bills, and the country would save on energy consumption.

• A national heritage program to preserve and renovate historic or architecturally significant buildings. This was one of seven job-creation schemes proposed by the New Democratic Party in its employment strategy paper published last October.

• A Youth Corps, of the kind already proposed to cabinet by Defence Minister Barney Danson, which would enroll young men and women in tasks like working in national parks, responding to natural disasters, helping out in isolated communities.

Ideas like these abound. Why did Macdonald reject the lot of them and opt instead for a token personal tax cut? The answer is bookkeeping — job-creation costs go on the government spending side of the ledger, tax cuts don't.

Proudly, Macdonald on budget night announced that total federal spending this year would be held to a 9.8 per cent increase over last year. Even this figure is in part a charade. Spending on the core of the budget, that is current goods and services which cover everything from civil service salaries to public works, actually is up by 11 per cent.

Statistics

Had Macdonald applied the $400 million where it could do most good for the unemployed — in direct job creation rather than in increased consumer spending — he would have had to increase total federal spending and so would have thrown away the political advantage of appearing to exercise restraint.

Other bookeeping gimmicks aren't hard to find in the budget. The post office, for instance, will roll up a massive $600 million deficit which means that the general taxpayer is subsidizing heavy users of the mails, most of them large corporations. The alternative — an increase in postal rates — would push up the consumer price index and reduce even further Macdonald's chances of getting the cost of living down to the government's 6 per cent target by next October.

The budget isn't a sellout to business — most of the corporation tax incentives were needed and were overdue. Instead, the budget is a sellout to statistics, like the rate of increase in government spending. Those who have been sold out for the sake of these statistics are the unemployed.

Get the Facts

It is important when facts exist to know them and get them straight if we are going to keep for ourselves the democratic processes we claim to support. Eunice L. Peters' letter to the editor decrying Premier Bennett's decision to use $2.25 million for medical aid to Vietnam children as an NDP promise, shows a frightening ignorance of facts.

This in fact was a resolution introduced in the legislative assembly by a Liberal member and voted on and passed unanimously by all members of the B.C. legislature in 1973. Premier Bennett is merely upholding the democratic process. It is a rare circumstance indeed to have unanimous vote on anything in any legislature. To use an an excuse "another government did it," would be to flout the meaning of democracy in this case.

As to the rest of Eunice Peters' letter, full of propaganda phrases, surely we know by now that no government is holy and pure, and none is unmitigated evil. Just as a reminder, the great "free" world power that fought the last years of the frightful 30-year war in Vietnam, i.e. the United States, was led by a man who had to leave his office under threat of impeachment for corruption and lying about the violation of the freedom of American citizens.

Tempering ourselves to clear thinking by examining the facts is essential if we are to meet the great demands on us as citizens seeking decent representative governments. And that applies to all parties from which governments might be formed: NDP, Liberal, or Socred. — Rhoda Kaellis, 207—1414 Hillside Avenue.

Megavitamins

In the Food for Thought column in the Times, March 17, Dr. Jean Mayer and Dr. Johanna Dwyer said: "High levels of vitamin C may induce the formation of painful 'gravel' in the bladder and reverse the effect of anti-clotting drugs." This statement may cause fear in the minds of many towards megavitamin therapy.

Dr. Abram Hoffer, whose name is synonymous with megavitamin therapy as one of its founders, has challenged Dr. Mayer to produce scientific evidence to support the claim that vitamin C in large doses may cause "gravel" in the bladder. (You will note that Dr. Mayer used the word "may".)

In very late and noncommittal replies, Dr. Mayer failed to supply any scientific proof for her claim. I would refer readers to the Journal of Orthomolecular Psychiatry, Vol. 5, No. 1, 1976, 2135 Albert St., Regina, Sask. in which Dr. Hoffer's letters and Dr. Mayer's replies appear.

The theory is, Dr. Hoffer states, that vitamin C can become oxalic acid and since oxalates have been identified in kidney stones they hypothesize that vitamin C may produce kidney stones.

"It is true that vitamin C can become oxalic acid, Dr. Hoffer states, but there is no scientific proof in the literature on vitamin C that this can form kidney stones."

I have taken between 3,000 and 6,000 mgms. of vitamin C daily for over 10 years. In that time I have not suffered any ill effects from this quantity. On the contrary, it appears that 2,000 mgms. of timed release vitamin C — the equivalent of 6,000 regular mgms. — is the optimum daily amount my system needs for healthful functioning. I was prescribed the vitamin as part of treatment for schizophrenia.

As a user of megavitamins, I am concerned that Dr. Mayer's statement may cause undue fear in the minds of readers towards megavitamins. I would like to see a more critically sound appraisal given to the use of megavitamins by Harvard nutritionists like Dr. Jean Mayer. — Bill Russell, Member of the Canadian Schizophrenia Foundation in Victoria, 9-1455 Craigflower Road.

Money Power

Soon after CBC Fifth Estate documentary on Hydro Quebec and an article in Weekend magazine on the same topic, our premier and his chameleon minister of municipal affairs both comment that B.C. Hydro sometimes needs reminding which is the tail and which is the dog.

While B.C. Hydro is a small operation in comparison to Hydro Quebec, similarities do exist in the autocratic manner in which both corporations conduct their affairs.

The U.S. money lenders seem to care little that the present Quebec government may tear Canada asunder. Their only concern is that there be no political interference in the affairs of Hydro Quebec. In British Columbia it would seem the interests of the money lenders have been taken care of by manoeuvring one of their own into a top executive position.

Money power in the United States is synonymous with the name Rockefeller and David Rockefeller is one of the founding fathers of that august body called the Tri-Lateral Commission and one of the executive members of that commission is Robert W. Bonner, B.C. Hydro chairman.

Are we in British Columbia developing, like the province of Quebec and Hydro Quebec, a state within a state, and should we too begin to wonder which one is the state ? — Nil Illegitemus Carborundum.

Life Is Sacred

Recent letters and articles in your paper supporting abortion do not seem to understand the thinking of those opposed. The anti-abortionist believes an unborn child to be a human being with a life as sacred as separate and as precious as that of a child already born.

As soon as we allow an erosion on this value placed on human life, then other values are threatened until presently very little is left. Witness for instance the increased incidence of child abuse. A mother who believes that her unborn child is a part of her body over which she has the power of life or death, could very easily transfer that thinking to her children already born.

In conscience an anti-abortionist must protest his or her tax dollars being used to terminate unborn life at the whim of the mother. Certainly there could be extenuating circumstances where there is a matter of which life to save; but 200,000 abortions must in large part have been a matter of the child being inconvenient, or where the parents were too irresponsible to use conventional methods of birth control.

If our laws hold sacred the life of a convicted murderer, no matter how heinous his crime, then surely they could be extended to protect innocent unborn life. — P. C. Malone, Victoria.

Millionaires

I would like to respond to E. J. Lattes' letter Obsession, in the Times March 24. Like the writer I would like to believe that our millionaires and quasi-millionaires in government are motivated by a genuine desire to serve their fellowmen. I am sure that some of the members of the present government have that commendable desire. However, policies implemented to date by this government do not reflect that those in control have that altruistic motivation.

It is very clear in many areas that their main calling is to serve the affluent. Witness the removal of the inheritance tax, the soft shoe approach to large corporations that exploit (or should we be more polite and say develop?) our resources, the easing of farm land freeze so that land speculators and developers can sell our land to us at high profits.

Why? Because they believe in and want to promote and foster a system which allows them to acquire great wealth with little or no effort or service to the people. They want to preserve the status quo.

It is unfortunate, if not tragic, that a lot of us equate affluence with success and feel that those who have acquired wealth are best fitted to govern. They, the millionaires in our government, are laughing all the way to the polls, and bank. A great Canadian and humanitarian, T. S. Woodsworth, who really demonstrated service to the people, coined the following as his guide: "I wish only for myself that which I desire for others." Can you imagine Messrs. Bennett, Mair, Vander Zalm, McGeer and Co. saying or believing that? — W. Stott, Sooke.

Double Standard

You report in your issue of March 31 that Mr. W. Barton, Canadian Ambassador to the UN, devoted "a major part of his speech to the growing repression of apartheid in South Africa and that he condemned the jailing of thousands of blacks, etc., etc."

It is refreshing to know that Canada is taking an official stand against repression and cruelty and, perhaps, when Mr. Barton has finished his crusade against South Africa he will commence one censuring the actions of Canada's partner in the commonwealth of nations — Great Britain — for that partner's similar repression and jailing in Northern Ireland.

There, under Canada's partner in the commonwealth of nations, for the past seven years up to one thousand persons have been, and continue to be, imprisoned without charge or trial; there one is liable to arrest without warrant or charge, detention without cause; press censorship is the ordinary thing; habeas corpus is suspended, appeal to the courts is suspended and denied; the statement of a police officer is sufficient evidence to obtain internment; interrogation by torture is normal. All very like South Africa in fact.

The European Court of Commission for Human Rights, by unanimous opinion, has stated the acts of the British government in dealing with prisoners in interrogation "constituted a practice of inhuman treatment and torture."

The government of Canada, which, no doubt, instructs Mr. Barton, cannot claim ignorance of these facts. Mr. Trudeau, when written to on this matter, replied that such matters were the internal affairs of the British government and, so, not a concern of Canada's. It is strange that the internal affairs of South Africa are Canada's concern while those of Great Britain are not. One also wonders why Canada provides training facilities in Alberta for the Special Air Services, the military arm of the British Government who are largely responsible for "the practice of inhuman treatment and torture."

Is it too much to hope that this will be next on Mr. Barton's agenda? — Kevin Cahill, 809 Lawndale Avenue.

Democratic Process

Mr. Campbell's recent tirade on a March 29 radio show only confirms his arrogance and sock-it-to-em attitude regarding the Western Community citizens.

Perhaps he would care to pat the children (Western Community) on the head and ask them to please behave while he and his arrogant so-called democratic bureaucratic nightmare plan our bankruptcy and otherwise suppress the people at his whim and will.

China has a chairman (Dictator).

We have ours.

The Western Community has a proper democratic process they can and will follow.

To create our own municipal government.

To disband and dismantle the Regional board as a whole.

The Western Community people are incensed at his board's "who are they to complain, and we don't give a damn" attitude.

We live in the 20th Century and as such are entitled to all the 20th Century benefits.

Not Raw Untreated sewage outfalls.

Remember, the people of the Western Community never forget, and he and his board may well go down in the History of B.C. as the biggest tyrants of the century. — Frank Heinrich, 3504 Happy Valley Rd.

The Health Experts Lose Their Credibility

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

The blizzard of letters with which angry dieters were reportedly going to bury Ottawa's saccharin ban has evidently failed to materialize.

According to health department mail-openers, the 300 protest letters received to date is "about average" for a major policy statement.

The balance of the protest blizzard could still be en route, of course — delayed temporarily by the automated efficiency of our postal service — but I doubt it.

Nonetheless, Canada's calorie counters don't seem to have been convinced that they risk cancer by consuming products containing saccharin. Rather than becoming unsaleable in the wake of the health department announcement, such products are evidently selling faster than ever before, as consumers stock up future supplies.

That must come as a surprise to Ottawa.

Swine Flu Scare

Asked in the Commons why he had imposed a ban on these products instead of merely requiring a warning label, Health Minister Marc Lalonde responded that, "for all practical purposes," such a warning would have the same effect as a ban.

But the credibility of health department diagnoses is clearly not all that the minister thinks it to be.

I suspect that the swine flu epidemic-that-wasn't had a lot to do with that. As long as that episode remains fresh in people's minds, alarms from Ottawa' health experts are going to be seen a little like those from the boy who cried "wolf."

Since Lalonde's rationale that a warning would have the same effect as a ban has been shot down by the boom rather than bust in sales, the question of whether people should be free to choose their own risks remains.

Asked why cigarettes are not being banned in view of their cancer-causing capacities, the health minister replied that "unfortunately, cigarettes are part of our environment and . . . it is not realistic to think we could forbid their use as easily as saccharin."

That's an answer, I guess, and certainly a pragmatic one, but it hardly comes to terms with the issue of the state's right to put limits on an individual's freedom to make his or her own choices.

And it's a far cry from the sort of principles Lalonde was offering last year when the health department's "lifestyle" campaign was launched.

However harmful to their health and well-being citizens' lifestyles may be, he told an international conference of health educators in Ottawa last summer, governments must resist the "totalitarian temptation."

Efforts should be directed "towards encouraging Canadians to assume greater responsibility for their own health through improvement of their lifestyles." It was unacceptable that such improvements be imposed on them, he said, however "noble and elevated" the motives of those in authority might be.

LALONDE
. . . Pragmatic

The most famous attempt to impose lifestyle improvement, of course, was Prohibition. It's a ghost that hasn't yet been fully laid to rest either, as the Ontario cabinet is presently proving with its decision to ban the sale of beer at Toronto Blue Jay baseball games.

And, province by province, the debate on whether compulsory seat belt use infringes on individual freedom of choice has been going on for more than a year.

Ontario and Quebec both now require that seat belts be fastened. Saskatchewan and British Columbia have introduced, but not yet passed, similar laws. And Nova Scotia, which was the first province to pass such a law, has had so many second thoughts on the subject that the act has yet to be proclaimed.

The federal department of consumer affairs, by virtue of its Hazardous Products Act, shares with the health department the power to ban potential health or safety risks. The health department mandate covers ingestible and cosmetic products primarily, while the consumer affairs department watches over everything else.

In the past year it has banned a metal-coated kite which could conduct electricity if struck by lightning, a variety of baby rattle small enough to be swallowed by a child, and trick birthday candles which were self-relighting and thus potential fire starters.

Since the freedom to choose one's own risks presupposes the maturity to make such choices knowingly, I doubt if anyone would object to such prohibitions of products intended for children.

Still Available

But the saccharin ban is in quite a different category.

Saccharin tablets will continue to be available, though only in drugstores after September, for diabetics and others who require them. But diet soft drinks contain saccharin will become a thing of the past on July 1 and other saccharin-containing diet foods will disappear from supermarket shelves four months later.

Since I have never done the diet-food trip, and have never been a saccharin user, I can't claim to have had my lifestyle tromped on by the proscription, but the principle still bothers me.

Or maybe it's the fact that, having been duly warned by the health department, I choose to keep smoking cigarettes. That's my risk-of-choice and I don't want it to be next on some bureaucratic do-gooder's proscription list.

Democracy Still Has Its Strengths

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

BOSTON — There is a school of gloom among democratic political thinkers, typified by some comments of Daniel Patrick Moynihan. "Democracy on the American model," he wrote two years ago, is on the way to becoming "a holdover form of government, one which persists in isolated or peculiar places . . . but which has simply no relevance to the future. It is where the world was, not where it is going."

For those who hold that gloomy view, it is more than a political-science abstraction. It may affect, for example, their view of Soviet power and intentions. Senator Moynihan, in opposing Paul Warnke as arms control negotiator, said he based his vote on the belief that the "balance of world power is changing" toward the Soviets.

Again, Moynihan, a former ambassador to India, was ready to have the U.S. write that country off as soon as Indira Gandhi took dictatorial power. In an interview published in Playboy magazine last month he said:

"When India ceased to be a democracy, our actual interest there just plummeted. I mean, what does it export but communicable disease?"

The election returns in India last month swung Moynihan from gloom to euphoria. "Political democracy," he said, "has reasserted its claim on the future of the world."

But true historical trends are not so changeable, and the world's future is not so instantly transformed. The gloom was overdone in the first place. Democracy is not so weak — not in relation to the Soviet Union any more than it turned out to be inside India. And the strength of decmocracy is not to be measured in weapons alone.

The great point about the Indian election is that it was a victory of ideas. Freedom was in a contest with the claims of order and a full stomach, a freedom won. Millions of desperately poor people preferred the risks of freedom to Mrs. Gandhi's achievement in making the trains run on time.

It is important to take a steady and realistic view of democracy's strength in the world, not claiming too much or too little. India is not a pattern for different societies. In her history, freedom had taken root. Americans should have learned by now how futile it is to expect Western democracy to flourish in cultures where it has no roots: in Vietnam, say, or Angola.

But there is no reason for believers in democracy to lack self-confidence. That is surely the lesson, for Americans, of the Indian election. And I think the same point is to be seen in President Jimmy Carter's bold words on behalf of human rights in the world, and in the Soviet Union's reaction to them.

Secretary Brezhnev's speech, denouncing "Washington's claims to teach others how to live," made some Americans who have doubted the wisdom of the Carter policy even more dubious. And of course there is reason for wise caution in pressing for human rights. This country cannot transform the Soviet system. As the president has repeatedly said, we do not want to sacrifice such vital objectives as arms limitation.

But the Brezhnev speech, on its face, did not seem to threaten other mutual interests of the superpowers because of the human rights issue. The linkage was soft — or so respected students of Soviet affairs thought. Brezhnev took a constructive position on arms limitation and the Middle East. He appeared to be inviting serious negotiations.

Moreover, the speech has to be seen as having had an internal purpose as well as the external one of warning Carter not to push too far. That was to reassure those elements in the Soviet hierarchy who are worried about the effects of Helsinki and the Carter initiative and dissent in the U.S.S.R. and Eastern Europe — who worry about being able to keep the lid on. In this sense it was hardly a self-confident speech.

In short, the president's words and the reaction they have evoked demostrate how powerful the idea of freedom can be. And that demonstration seems to me to go a long way, in itself, toward justifying Carter's policy. For this country and its friends in the world have needed renewed confidence in our ideas.

The Times of London spoke the other day of the need in the United States not only to "re-engage the domestic support for detente which Dr. Kissinger lost" but also to "regain some of the ideological appeal which the United States once had in the world." Carter, it said, had "to do something to restore the confidence of the West. It is no bad thing to remind people what they are supposed to be defending.

But the main effect of Carter's words must be on his own people. After the dark years in which many of us became ashamed of things done in America's name, it simply feels good to hear a president denounce torture and inhumanity in the most direct way.

'Arms Control' an Illusion?

By DON OBERDORFER

(A review in the Washington Post of the book, The Game of Disarmament, by Alva Myrdal, published by Pantheon)

The development, production and worldwide buildup of armaments since the Second World War is one of the stupendous stories of our times, so vast in its scope and importance that citizens and officials alike find it difficult to comprehend. For the most part, we prefer to avert our eyes or to concentrate on the familiar "threat" and "response" mechanism that is driven by fear, nationalism, and a sense that it is better to be safe than sorry.

Upward of $300 billion is spent in the world each year on military weapons and forces — more than the worldwide expenditures on either education or health, and roughly equivalent to the combined annual incomes of the poor countries that comprise more than half of mankind. Military expenditures in nearly all countries are rising, Washington and Moscow leading the way with ever more numerous, sophisticated, and powerful weapons each year.

Following the lead and responding to the salesmen of advanced countries, at least 39 developing nations of the Third World now possess supersonic warplanes, and at least 18 of them are producers of major weapons under license. As Third World nations have beaten their plowshares into swords, their spending and debts due to military programs have risen sharply, with important consequences for their political structure as well as economies and foreign policies.

The United States and the Soviet Union, possessing the godlike power to destroy each other and devastate bystander nations within minutes of a nuclear exchange, are the moving forces in this competition. They also dominate the information, analysis and the framework for discussion about military developments.

Alva Myrdal, Sweden's chief representative to the Geneva disarmament talks, 1962-73, has made a brave and painstaking attempt to break out of the bipolar perspective and report the arms race from the viewpoint of lesser and independent nations — that is, the rest of humanity. Her conclusions, implied in the title, are that detente and SALT have institutionalized the arms race rather than curbed it and the other efforts at "arms control" have been illusory or ineffective, not by accident but because the super-powers want it that way.

Myrdal's documentation and her despair are rooted in her disarmament conference experience, but in her broad canvas she refers only too fleetingly to what she saw and heard. The reader, for example, would like to know more about diplomatic pressure from Washington and Moscow which she blames for the failure to obtain a comprehensive ban on nuclear testing in 1963.

The crux of her objection to U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons policy is that the arsenals have multiplied far beyond anything needed for deterrence. She cites McGeorge Bundy, quoted by former Defense Department official Herbert York, as saying, "In the real world of real political leaders — whether here or in the Soviet Union — a decision that would bring even one hydrogen bomb on one city of one's own country would be recognized in advance as a catastrophic blunder; 10 bombs on 10 cities would be a disaster beyond history; and 100 bombs on 100 cities are unthinkable."

Despite this, the latest Pentagon figures say the United States possesses 8,400 strategic nuclear warheads plus an unspecified number reserved for "restrikes" in case of war, and the Soviet Union is reported to have 3,300 strategic nuclear warheads. If existing policy is followed both sides will make many more.

Another amply documented theme is the growing brutalization of warfare in the era of napalm, cluster bomb units, and other antipersonnel weapons. It is startling to realize how far weapons and accepted practice have come from the rules of warfare, adopted in generations past, to limit the use of unnecessary force and prohibit indiscriminate attacks on noncombatants. It seems almost unbelievable now that as late as 1938 President Roosevelt asked all governments in the growing European conflict to declare that under no circumstances would they submit civilian populations to air bombardment.

The author and her husband, noted sociologist Gunnar Myrdal, were instrumental in establishing the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, which compiles and publishes extensive data in the arms field, but she acknowledges that the bulk of current information originates in the U.S. and very little from the U.S.S.R. and other nations.

Despite her overall pessimism, Myrdal holds out hope that the open U.S. society, under new leadership, will find a way to lead the world out of folly. This was written before the election of Jimmy Carter, who comes to office condemning the nuclear and conventional buildup of arms and promising to turn policy around.

Myrdal's extensive account makes clear how much of a break with contemporary trends any serious moves toward disarmament would be. If Carter is determined and powerful enough to make a start — and if he can convince the other superpower — his achievement will be of truly historic proportions.

Crown Corporation Planned To Manage B.C.'s Computers

Legislation setting up a new Crown corporation to run the province's $22 million-a-year computer operations was introduced Monday by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe.

The B.C. Systems Corporation will consolidate and coordinate the bovernment's diverse web of computer systems and make the operation more efficient and sensible, Wolfe said.

About 300 government employees involved in couputer operation from various government ministries, departments, branches, divisions and sections will be transferred to the corporation, although they may physically stay where they are.

The headquarters of the corporation will be in Victoria and house about 30 senior management and technical experts to be either hired or promoted by the corporation's board of directors.

The board will be comprised almost entirely of cabinet ministers, Wolfe said, even though it is government policy to separate Crown corporations from politics.

But, Wolfe said, it was considered appropriate in this case because the corporation will deal only with government departments and agencies.

All ministries and branches of government, for example the Moter-Vehicle Branch, will have their computer operations co-ordinated by the corporation.

As well, Wolfe said, the bill allows the corporation to designate certain other government-related bodies, such as school boards or commissions like the B.C. Energy Commission, which will have their operations run by the systems corporation.

Crown corporations and universities can be included by invitation and agreement between those bodies and the corporation, although it is unlikely that Crown corporations with highly-developed computer systmems such as the Insurance Corp. of B.C. or B.C. Hydro, would be invited to join.

The over-all plan for the corporation is the result of a study by computer expert Bill McMinn of Woods, Gordon and Co., a management consultant firm, carried out in an attempt to stop rising costs of the computer operation.

McMinn said Monday the costs of government computer operations are approaching "outrageous."

He said costs are rising at about 20 ar 30 per cent a year.

"This is an attempt to make better use of that money and to stop the rising costs before they get right out of sight," he said.

A unique feature of the Systems Act is a clause governing the confidentiality of the information which will be contained in the centralized computer system.

The act provides for a fine of up to $5,000 for any officer or employee of the systems corporation who dixcloses without authorization any information kept in the system.

McMinn said he thinks that part of the act is the first in Canada.

3 ISLAND TOWNS GET N.I.P. CASH

Three Vancouver Island municipalities — Saanich, Esquimalt and Courtenay — will receive a total of almost $1 million under the Neighborhood Improvement Program.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis and federal Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet announced Monday that 16 B.C. municipalities will receive a ttal of $8.25 million under the joint federal-provincial-municipal program.

The grants are 50 per cent federal, 25 per cent provincial and 25 per cent municipal which can be paid with a low interest loan from the federal government.

The municiplaities can select neighborhoods within their boundaries for designation as NIP areas.

Homes in designated neighborhoods are eligible to borrow up to $10,000 from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. to restore homes to acceptable standards of health and safety.

Up to $3,700 of that loan is forgivable, depending on the income of the borrower.

Committee To Review Viet Fund

The B.C. government Monday set up an all-party committee to make a final decision on what to do with $2.25 million committed in 1973 to help the war-ravaged children of Vietnam.

The legislature Monday unanimously approved a motion by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy to establish a 10-member legislative committee to recommend a course of action on the controversial fund.

In 1973, in a rare all-party agreement under the NDP government, the legislature voted to send $2.25 million to fund hospitals and rehabilitation centres to help Vietnamese children.

Little of the money was sent and it appeared for a while the Sociel Credit government would not honor the commitment.

No Food Probe Role For Gibson, Wallace

The Social Credit government dug in its heels Monday on an opposition demand that Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Tory leader Scott Wallace be allowed to sit on a legislative committee studying food prices.

NDP house leader Bill King failed to get the required unanimous approval of the legislature to allow the minority party leaders to sit on the committee.

Premier Bill Bennett implied the only way they will make it is for the NDP to drop two members in favor of Gibson and Wallace.

The legislative committee on agriculture is about to be activated to conduct a full-fledged inquiry into food prices in B.C.

Each MLA has to choose at the start of the session which legislative committees he wants to sit on. Gibson and Wallace turned down the normally-dull agriculture committee in favor of other committees, not knowing it would be handed the food price inquiry.

Bennett said in the house no MLAs "are more equal than others."

He said the two had made their decision at the start of the session and that the opposition had a set number of seats on the committee (three). He seemed to suggest that if two NDP members were dropped it would be then possible for Gibson and Wallace to take their place.

Seven Socreds and three NDPers now comprise the committee.

Internship Plan For Dentists

Student dentists are going to be allowed to intern under the supervision of fully-qualified dentists, Health Minister Bob McClelland said Monday.

McClelland said in a news release that through an amendment to the Dentistry Act, Regulations, a group known as "dental student practioners" will be set up as a first step in improving dental service in the province's smaller communities.

The minister said the group would be comprised of dental college students who are entering their final year of study.

He said the move is intended to relieve the work load on dentists working in smaller communities and at the same time to introduce students who are within sight of graduating to the actual conditions of dental practice.

He said the plan would be limited to about eight students at first, but the number would be increased if the scheme is successful.

"The dental schools themselves admit that the training in practice management they offer as part of their course is not really sufficient to prepare the student for the economic struggle of running a dental practice," said McClelland.

"This experience will give him the practical experience he needs, and also show him the many advantages of working in a smaller community."

Bortnick ICBC Warning Not Gov't Policy—Bennett

Premier Bill Bennett assured the legislature Monday that Insurance Corporation of B.C. general manager Norman Bortnick was not speaking for the government when he recently warned ICBC employees that a strike could sink the operation.

Bortnick said the public would not tolerate a strike similar to the one that stalled the insurance giant for more than three months in 1975, and warned employees that job action could shut down ICBC, bringing private insurance companies back into the province.

In responding to questions in the house from Conservative leader Scott Wallace, Premier Bennett dissociated his administration from Bortnick's femarks saying that "he wasn't speaking for the government."

Bennett said he hadn't talked to the ICBC head about the matter and referred further questions to Education Minister Pat McGeer. McGeer, absent from the legislature at the time, is the minister responsible for ICBC.

ICBC employees are voting this week on a contract to replace the two-year agreement that ran out last Sept. 30.

Gas Deal Termed Second Best

The provinciial government has "settled for a second-best deal on Alberta gas," Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said Monday.

The Liberal leader said "the new agreement does nothing for our exploration and is distinctly second-best to the deal that was already worked out 10 days ago."

Gibson pointed out that in a proposed settlement made public two weeks ago, B.C. had an option to accept 55 million cubic feet of natural gas a day from Alberta from 1981 to 1989 in addition to a 104 million minimum.

He said that in the arrangement announced Monday, the province still has to take a mimimum 104 million cubic feet a day for 12 years — now until 1989 — but that B.C. loses the right to the 55 million cubic feet a day for the last seven of the 12 years.

Body Found In Reservoir

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The body of Steven Gordon Craig, 19, of North Vancouver, who drowned in the Cleveland Dam reservoir March 20, was recovered Monday.

The drinking water supplied to the Vancouver area from the dam was shut off March 21, and officials said Monday it was expected to be shut off for an additional week while water tests are done.

The city switched to alternative water reservoir supplies since the search for the body began.

SLICK SIGHTED OFF WASH. STATE

LONG BEACH, Wash. (AP) — An oil slick three miles long and half a mile wide was sighted off the Washington coast Monday, after more than 500 oil-soaked birds washed ashore during the weekend.

More than 200 of the common murres and western grebes covered with thick oil were dead, but officials said they were not sure the slick sighted was the same oil that fouled the birds.

"We just don't know if they are related," John Sayre, a spokesman for the United States fish and wildlife service in Portland said late Monday.

Federal and local officials along with volunteers are trying to save 350 oil-soaked birds that appeared along a 50-mile stretch of the southern Washington coast between Ilwaco and Ocean Shores. Many were being taken to the Seattle Wild Bird Clinic for cleaning.

One federal official gave the birds "a better than 50-50 chance" for surviving.

A coast guard spokesman in Seattle said the source of the slick was unknown.

"It could be the result of cumulative legal dumping," said Lieut. Pat Popieski.

Full Circle On Roy Road

Saanich's plan to provide reasonably priced single-family lots in the Roy Road area has gone full circle with the provincial government offering to sell the property back to the muncipality.

Earlier this year residents and environmentalists packed the council chamber to oppose the government's proposal to build 334 housing units on the 75.8 acres bounded by Wilkinson, Roy, Carey and Interurban.

In a letter read Monday, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, a former Saanich mayor, said he was aware the council wanted a lower density.

Curtis offered to sell the land back at the government's acquisition cost and provide interim financing and technical assistance. No prices were mentioned.

The minister said his department has entered into similar development agreements with a growing number of municipalities.

Saanich, on the advice of municipal planner Gil Laurenson, began assembling the land several years ago, the bulk of it being acquired by mid-1973.

Saanich's intention at that time was to service the land and offer it at reasonable prices for single-family homes.

The former NDP government, however, decided in 1973 to buy the land and develop it through its provincial housing department.

If Saanich's original plan had been pursued, homes would now be on at least some of the acreage, land commissioner Frank Harris said today.

The buy-back proposal will be considered by the lands, planning and housing committee.

U.S., Soviet Row Cheered by China

By ROSS H. MUNRO
Special to The Times

Peking — China expressed pleasure Monday over the battle of words between U.S. and Soviet leaders following the breakdown of the arms limitation talks in Moscow last week.

"This wrangling between the Soviet Union and the United States is good in opening the eyes of the people," the New China News Agency declared, "for it shows that the Soviet-U.S. SALT talks serve only as a means to cover up their nuclear arms race."

These were the concluding words of the NCNA's "dash by dash" account of the statements made by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and U.S. President Jimmy Carter, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and presidential aide Zybigniew Brzezinski since the breakdown of the talks last week.

"The White House is giving vent to its rancor because its proposals on 'limitation' of nuclear weapons were rejected while the Kremlin is retorting in a lounder voice," was how the NCNA summarized the exchange of criticism and accusation.

China has long expressed its skepticism and its opposition to the U.S.-Soviet arms limitation talks and Monday's NCNA article was in that tradition. While the NCN Adispatch could be characterized as unsympathetic to the United States, it was much more critical of the Soviet Union.

The NCNA declared at one point, for instance, that President Carter had "touched the new czars to the quick by urging them to 'act in good faith' in the forthcoming talks."

CHALLENGE BY SWISS ON SACCHARIN BAN

BERN (Reuter) — Swiss public health authorities have challenged Canadian and U.S. claims that the artificial sweetener sacharin might lead to cancer in humans.

The Public Hygiene Office said in a statement that Swiss authorities will not follow the U.S. and Canada in curbing the use of saccharin.

The office said the tests on rats which led to the proposed ban involved so much saccharin concentrate that human consumers could never absorb such levels.

The W. J. Stewart . . . they're rooting for her

This Lady Wants Date Badly

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Now and again a seagull salutes her with a lonely cry, or the wind, as if mindful of her plight, hums softly through her rigging.

Every seaman who has sailed any length of time in coastal waters knows her. She's the W. J. Stewart, the trim 235-foot hydrographic vessel once a familiar sight in the straits, inlets and bays of the British Columbia coast. She was named after a dominion hydrographer.

And they also know her worth as one of the finest vessels of her kind to ply coastal waters between Washington and Alsaska.

Since September, 1975, the W. J. Stewart has not been used for hydrographic surveys. She has been docked at Patricia Bay — temporarily laid up under the federal government's austerity program.

Meantime, she is being put to some use. In June last year the oceanographic institute's ship division moved its offices aboard.

The ship is in prime running order — her engines and equipment greased, her brass polished, her decks painted and kept in tip-top shape waiting for the day she is ordered to sea.

But will she ever put out to sea again?

This question is now being asked by the men who have served her.

Dr. R. W. Stewart, director general of the Institute of Ocean Sciences, isn't too optimistic.

"No decision has yet been made to take her out of service permanently, but as time goes by the chances of the Stewart sailing again grows less and less," he said.

Like all the ship's former officers, Stewart would hate to see the vessel sold or scrapped, but the problem is she is expensive to operate.

One man who would be extremely sorry to see her go is 64-year-old Capt. Frank Green.

He was the first seaman employed on the Stewart after she arrived from the East Coast, via the Panama Canal, to begin her work as a hydrographic vessel in 1932.

She was built by the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. of Ontario.

He became her master in 1968-69, relinquishing his command following his appointment to his present position of assistant regional marine superintendent.

Green's attachment to the vessel is not based on sentiment but on the ship's performance and seaworthiness.

"She is one of the last of her kind," he said, pointing out that she is powered by a triple expansion steam engine, a type no longer used on modern vessels.

"Engines of this type are not costly to maintain."

"She has an excellently designed hull," he added. "That's what makes her so seaworthy. She is steady. I've taken her through many storms. Ah, I know her well."

Green also pointed out that she had a rivetted hull. Today's ship's plates are welded.

"Apart from that she is comfortable," he said. "She is finished with teak and maple. Today they use arborite—use as little wood as possible.

Green said the W. J. Stewart has not only weathered some of the severest storms on the coast but survived a sinking that would have finished most ships.

On June 11, 1944, at 2 p.m., she foundered on Ripple Rock in Seymour Narrows. Miraculously, her boilers didn't explode when the engine room filled with water.

She was safely beached 20 minutes later at nearby Plumber Bay and back in service in 1945 after undergoing repairs at Yarrows Ltd.

Deep Trouble

The W. J. Stewart survived a sinking after hitting infamous Ripple Rock in Seymour Narrows in June, 1944. Her boosters say most ships never would have sailed again but she was repaired at Yarrows and carried on.

Wave of Charges Laid In Base Drug Attack

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Maritime Command Pacific has been hit by a wave of marijuana offences with 25 summary trials in the past month.

The charges were revealed today by Rear-Admiral Collier, who said the marijuana use involves young seamen and soldiers who have been in the service 18 months and less.

An armed forces spokesman said further drug charges will be laid against a "substantial number" of CFB Esquimalt personnel.

The names of those to be charged are being withheld until the charges are laid.

"We have had a number of summary trials, about 25 in the last month," Collier said.

COLLIER
. . . problems for command

"Every month we have a few, unfortunately."

Summary trials are those in which the commanding officers of the units administer the trials.

Collier said the incidents now being investigated may be dealt with either at summary trials or at the higher level of courts martial.

In July, 1975, nine armed forces personnel, all members of the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry, were court martialed after being found guilty of drug charges.

Collier said the command has an ongoing program on drug and alcohol abuse, designed to reduce the problem.

The admiral said the drug problem "comes in waves." The program is designed to include the families of men with either drug or alcohol problems.

"Our program is to try and teach the kids," he said. "But it is slow in working and comes after the fact, unfortunately."

He said 90 per cent are young, fairly new recruits with very few older married men involved.

The first indication of the drug crackdown came today in a telephone call to the Times.

The anonymous caller, who identified himself only as a seaman, said armed forces personnel are unhappy about being "hassled" in the drug investigation.

The caller said a number of those who have already been charged did not have marijuana in their possession and appear to have been convicted on hearsay evidence.

"In the forces you're guilty until proven innocent," the caller said.

Keeling Quits Saanich

Frank Keeling—the administrative assistant to Saanich Mayor Ed Lum—today quit his $22,500 a year job.

Keeling threatened to resign last week unless he was given a more responsible management post.

His departure comes in the wake of a closed-door council meeting Monday that saw aldermen refuse to enfirm Keel-Keeling in his post.

It was decided at the meeting that council's personnel committee evaluate the need for his position.

derman refuse to confirm year ago.

Last week he complained he had been given "joe jobs" for the most part since being hired and added: "I'm not prepared to continue in this role."

Acting mayor Sandy Noel said after Monday's meeting: "We don't accept threats."

TOWN TALK

Perhaps Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf has the answer.

In a press release last week, Bawlf was quoted as giving an assurance that work on removing the derelict finger wharf would "cause no impedance to the annual Swiftsure gathering within the Inner Harbor."

According to our Concise Oxford, impedance is "total virtual resistance of electric current to alternating curent, arising from the resistance and reactance of the conductor."

If you're looking for a word that means hindrance or obstruction, Sam, try "impediment." Forget impedance. No impudence intended.

GIBSON
. . . on spit

They're going to roast a bull Wednesday night in the Hotel Vancouver.

On the spit will be Gordon Gibson Sr. — better known to British Columbians as the "Bull of the Woods."

The dinner cum roast will feature an array of prominent citizens including Alex Macdonald, Garde Gardom, Herb Capozzi, Stu Hodgson, Pat Brennan, J. V. Clyne, Jack Webster and some "surprise guests" not yet named.

The betting is that while the speakers will score Gibson with a few shafts, the victim will battle back and wind up with the last word — on just about everybody present.

The exception came this weekend when she received a buss on the cheek in public from Rear-Admiral Dan Mainguy.

It happened in Moncton, N.B., at the annual dinner of the Navy League of Canada. The kiss came after Mainguy had presented her with a Canadian armed forces scroll in recognition of the "meritorious manner" in which she supports the sea and the navy.

Reports have it the admiral also was seen to blush.

Dufour is the first woman to receive the award — the scroll, that is — and also the first woman national vice-president the league has had since its inception 82 years ago.

Last week Dr. William E. J. Ekins of 1354 Beach Drive marked his 100th birthday and it's interesting to look at an earlier summary he wrote to see how far medicine has travelled.

When he was at medical school in Toronto at the turn of the century, most students rented a room for 75 cents to $1.50 a week and 21 meal tickets in almost any restaurant went for $1.50 to $2.

Practising on the Prairies in the first decade of this century, he recalls an 80-mile round trip by horse and buggy to a confinement case between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m.

Crossing a flooding river, he remembers his buggy floating and the horses having to swim to make it.

Dear Alisa: I have this problem of butting into other people's business. Can you help me?

How do we know? Because her proud grandfather, John Murray, assistant executive director at Victoria General Hospital, showed us this fat pile of clippings.

And how did Alisa handle that frank question above? She wrote: ". . . instead of just butting in, ask if you can add something. If they say yes, then fine. If they say no, then just say okay and walk away. But don't worry because it is good to be interested in people."

In our last Town Talk column—it ran on April Fool's Day you'll recall—we had a brief story mentioning that city archivist Ainslie Helmcken had been designated a heritage structure.

Helmcken himself broke up.

But he had hysterics when a sweet little old lady (she'll remain nameless to spare her embarrassment) rang him up to offer her profuse congratulations on the honor.

Helmcken, apparently, was helpless for hours.

Yes Or No? Mr. Davis

Saanich council will write Transport Minister Jack Davis demanding a straight answer on whether the Brentwood-Mill Bay ferry will be taken out of service.

The decision was made Monday after council received what Ald. John Mika termed "a very circumspect civil service answer" to a letter sent two weeks ago.

Mika said the government should "Not give us a political answer but gave us a direct answer as to whether or not the Mill Bay service will continue."

In his reply, Charles Gallagher, general manager of the B.C. Ferries Corporation, reminded council the ferry service was originally initiated to compensate for the poor state of the Malahat Highway.

"The matter that the board of directors have to be concerned with is whether, on a route where there is a road alternative, it is sensible to expand large capital sums (for dock reconstruction) which could be better utilized to improve facilities on routes where there are no road alternatives," Gallagher wrote.

Ald. Ian Cass said he was opposed to "the old empty bottomless pit of putting more money into roads."

Bricklayers Set Up Picket Lines

Bricklayers recently certified at Beechwood Construction Ltd. have set up picket lines at two Victoria building sites in a move to force a first contract with the company.

The Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union, Local 1, posted pickets early Monday morning at a Gorge Road East construction site, and expanded their lines today to a second Beechwood project on Quadra, north of McKenzie.

The union won certification after a hearing before the Labor Relations Board early in March.

Beechwood is a member of the Independent Contractors and Businessmen's Association, an organization supporting the right-to-work movement.

Union representative Ben Fleming said the decision to strike came after a series of meetings failed to make any progress towards a first settlement.

Fleming said the union wants the standard agreement that just about every other construction company has with bricklayers.

Asked if the union views the dispute as a showdown with right-to-work factions in the city, Fleming said, "No, but some people on the other side might think so . . . we view this as just another company."

Labor generally regards the right-to-work movement as a union-breaking weapon used by employers to keep wages low.

Pheasant Shoot Blocked

North Saanich council voted narrowly Monday night to reverse an earlier decision and withdraw approval of a pheasant shooting project on the farm of George Alyard.

Mayor Paul Grieve said today the subject produced considerable debate and a number of viewpoints but in the end there was a 4-3 vote against allowing the pheasant shoot.

Ald. Wilf Price, who earlier supported the project, said he had numerous calls opposing it and saw no reason why it had to go ahead now, the mayor said. It was Price's vote which constituted the swing.

In February, council voted 4-3 to approve an application from former alderman Alyard to allow shooting of pheasant from August to March within the boundaries of his 300-acre Brackenhurst farm.

At that time Grieve voted against the application for what he said were other than emotional reasons. He said the municipality's firearms bylaw prohibits firing of any guns in North Saanich and he doesn't believe it should be changed for one applicant.

Also opposing the move in February and voting to rescind it Monday night were aldermen Eric Sherwood and John Lapham.

Favoring it in February and again Monday night were aldermen George Westwood, Robert Thompson and Owen Philp.

Shortly after the issue came to light Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf ordered a review of pheasant shooting programs in the province and said no new licences permitting such hunts would be issued until his study is completed. There has been no word from Bawlf on the subject, but he stressed at the time the moratorium was not permanent.

Alyard said at the time he was surprised by Bawlf's move because pheasant shooting programs had been in existence for some time, notably in the Fraser Valley for several years.

Price's response to Bawlf's temporary ban was: "Pretty soon they'll want us all to be vegetarians."

He said killing pheasants was like killing chickens except that "chickens aren't flying when you kill them."

Neonex

Neonex International Ltd. reports a net loss of $501,000 or seven cents a share for the year ended Dec. 31, compared with a net loss of $1,142,000 or 16 cents a share in 1975. The company said in a news release that sales and revenue increased to $266 million from $251 million the year before. Neonex is an industrial corporation with manufacturing, sales and service locations in Canada and the United States.

Simpsons-Sears

The board of directors of Simpsons-Sears Limited has declared a quarterly dividend of 6 cents a share on all the common shares of the company. The devidend is payable on June 14, 1977, to shareholders of record May 13, 1977.

Vestgron

Vestgron Mines Ltd., a subsidiary of Cominco Ltd., reports it had net earnings of $15.6 million or $3.68 a share for the year ended Dec. 31, 1976, down from $15.8 million or $3.74 a share the previous year.

Revenue declined to $49.2 million from $50.5 million in 1975, but earnings reinvested in the business at the end of the year increased to $40.8 million compared to $25.2 million in 1975.

Controlled

Controlled Foods International Ltd. reports that earnings increased to $1,225,000 or 66 cents a share last year from $1,022,000 or 51 cents a share in 1975.

L. E. Fuller, president of the company based in Burnaby, said that gross revenue of the food service increased to $35.5 million from $33 million, reflecting the forward progress the company has made during the past several years.

Growth in earnings per share outstripped actual profit increase because of lower average shares outstanding in 1976, down to 1,836,983 from 1,976,725 in 1975.

Fuller said that during 1975 Controlled Foods had acquired 638,386 of its own shares.

Page Petroleum Ltd. reports reduced revenues and earnings for 1976. Gross revenues were $719,582 compared to $823,894 for 1975 while net income declined to $6,797 (5 cents per share) from $157,135 (11.1 cents per share). Net oil and gas sales decreased to $708,875 from $756,923 in the previous year. Reduced oil sales were due to a decline in U.S. production and lower market allowables in Alberta.

At Boundary Lake in northwest Alberta, Page now has interests in seven oil wells. A water flood study done by consultants recommends the drilling of up to fifteen additional oil wells and seven water injectors. Page will own approximately 21 per cent of the project when fully developed. Page also has field development wells to drill at Worsley, in northwestern Alberta and Morrin in central Alberta.

Balco

Balco Industries Ltd., a Kamloops-based wood products company, has reported net earnings of $1,534,683 or $1.53 a share, up from $371,468 or 37 cents a share for 1975.

Sales rose to $18.5 million from $14.1 million in the previous year.

Balco has announced it will buy an 84-per-cent interest in Integrate Wood Products Ltd., also of Kamloops, from controlling shareholders at $2.50 a share. The offer is subject to several conditions including one that says at least six per cent of the shares must be purchased at the same price from other shareholders.

Western

Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. earned $2,165,241 or 57.2 cents a share in the six months ended Feb. 28, down slightly from $2,181,200 or 57.7 cents a share a year earlier, the company said Wednesday.

Extraordinary gains of $58,680 from tax loss carryforwards raised total earnings in the latest period to $2,223,921 or 59 cents a share. Last year there was extraordinary income of $4,156,638, mainly from sale of investments, that brought total net to $6,337,838 or $1.71 a share.

Although television revenues exceeded budgets, subsidiary BCTV's earnings declined in the second quarter of the fiscal year, the company said. This was due in part to the entry in the local market of CKVU, a Vancouver television station.

The company also said BCTV incurred higher program, news and engineering costs during the period.

Western owns Radio Station CKNW in New Westminster and is part owner of BCTV. It also owns, through Northwest Sports Enterprises, Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League.

Loans Won By S. Korea

PARIS (Reuter) — South Korea has won approval for international loans totalling $2.5 billion a year throughout its current five-year development plan, World Bank officials said.

This is $500 million a year more than international aid the country has received annually during the past three years, they told reporters.

A 10-country consortium, sponsored by the World Bank, agreed to meet South Korea's foreign exchange needs to boost the country's industrial development and export drive.

The World Bank said that the consortium, known as the International Consultative Group for Korea, considered South Korea's 1977-81 development plan as sound.

Ottawa Tightens Airline Control

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is going to toughen transportation legislation to prevent provinces from buying airlines, Transport Minister Otto Lang said Monday.

The federal government wants to make sure it retains control over air carriers, Lang said. He will propose an amendment to a bill now awaiting second reading — approval in principle—in the Commons.

The move follows a recent Supreme Court of Canada decision that upheld the Alberta government's purchase of Pacific Western Airlines.

The amendment will prohibit the transfer of shares or the issuing of a licence to an international or interprovincial air carrier without approval of the federal government, a government statement said.

The Canadian transport commission will be empowered to suspend or cancel the licence of any airline which allows its shares to be transferred or its debt to be acquired by any province.

The proposed transportation legislation is designed to protect federal airports and airport sites from encroachment on their boundaries.

Alberta acquired control of the regional airline in August, 1974 through buying 99 per cent of its common shares and all of its preferred shares. PWA serves British Columbia, Alberta and the Northwest Territories.

The Supreme Court of Canada ruled in February that Alberta was not obligated to seek Canada transport commission approval for the PWA purchase.

This was a reversal of an earlier Federal Court of Canada ruling that air regulations on airline purchases do apply to provincial governments.

Lang said after the Supreme Court ruling that the government planned to plug a hole in federal legislation which permitted Alberta's purchase of PWA without transport commission approval.

But he said the planned legislation would be unlikely to overturn retroactively the PWA deal.

The British Columbia government has repeatedly tried without success to get the federal government to deny PWA permission to move its head offices to Alberta.

Dream Car Becomes Nightmare

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebecers who believed they had found "an economic dream car" in General Motors Vega and Astre models are living "a nightmare" now, says the Automobile Protection Association.

President Phil Edmonston told a news conference Monday his group has received more than 3,000 complaints from disgruntled Vega and Astre owners.

The consumers' rights advocate said the APA has helped 20 unsatisfied Vega and Astre owners win their cases in small claims court.

Owners claim their vehicles are prone to premature rusting and engine trouble. Edmonston said GM has issued a "secret warranty program" which benefits only those who protest loudest.

Michel Desmarchais of nearby Beloeil told reporters his 1976 Vega "burned while parked in my driveway last December, three months after I purchased it."

Barbara Adeles said she felt her 1973 Vega "is a great little car," despite the fact "I have to put in a quart of oil each time I fill the gas tank."

Tories, New Democrats Both Blast Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — A six-day budget debate opened in the Commons Monday with Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic, blaming the government for alienating business and Max Saltsman, New Democratic Party finance critic, saying too many favors went to business.

Both opposition parties demanded an end to wage and price controls and both proposed motions of non-confidence in the Liberal government, charging it failed to provide economic leadership or battle unemployment.

Both motions, which are scheduled to be voted on later, will likely be defeated because the Liberals have a majority in the 264-seat Commons.

Stevens opened the attack by saying the government has foiled Canada's potential to be a prosperous country, by "creating a hostile, often frustrating climate for business."

Saltsman, in turn, criticized both the Liberal and Conservative parties for promoting the view "that the way to save the country is to save big businesses and to give them many tax concessions."

Main features in the budget will provide about $1.2 billion, through tax changes, to corporations and individuals who invest in corporations.

It also contained a $100 million addition to government make-work programs. Relatively small, Manpower Minister Bud Cullen agreed during debate. At last count, there were at least 932,000 unemployed Canadians.

Stevens said the budget meant a government deficit this year of $7.2 billion, a cost to each taxpayer of $548 a year, including interest.

To make Canada a hospitable country for business, the government must become more financially responsible and must reduce regulation and harrassment of companies, he argued.

27 'Problem Substances' On Hazard Listing

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal environment department released a list of 27 problem substances today — long-lasting chemicals and chemical families which may pose a threat to the environment and may be a human health hazard.

Jim Brydon, head of the environmental contaminants control branch, stressed in an interview Monday that the four-level list "is not written in stone" and the priorities it sets can be shifted if new knowledge indicates a chemical is more hazardous than previously thought.

The first category contains "those substances the government is satisfied pose a significant danger to the environment or to human health and for which regulations are being developed."

There are only two chemicals in this category:

—Polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), highly stable, heat-resistant chemicals used in the electrical industry. Studies done two years ago in Britain on monkeys indicate concentrations as low as 2.5 parts per million caused reproductive failures. U.S. studies have linked the chemical to cancer.

—Chlorofluormethanes, better known as the F11 and F12 flurocarbon propellants, used mainly in spray cans. These gases are suspected of destroying the earth's ozone layer which shields the planet from the sun's ultraviolet radiation.

In the second category of the list are "those substances which the government has reason to believe pose a significant danger to the environment or to human health and which are being investigated in depth to determine the nature and extent to the danger and the means to alleviate that danger."

There are four substances in that category: asbestos, lead, mercury and Mirex, a long-lasting, poisonous chemical that was used both as a pesticide and as a fire retardant in plastics.

The third category includes substances "which the government believes may pose a significant danger to the environment or to human health, or about which further detailed information is required."

Arsenic, cadmium, and the following chemical families fall under this category: The chlorobenzenes used as solvents and fungicides; the chlorophenols used as solvents, fungicides and as wood preservatives. The hexachlorocyclopentadiene adducts, fire retardants used to replace the toxic chemical Mirex; organotins used as plasticizers; phthalate esters added to plastics to make them flexible; polybrominated biphenyls and polychlorinated terphenyls both fire retardant and the triarylphosphates which are used as fuel additives also fall under this third category.

In the fourth category are "those substances which the government suspects may pose a significant danger to the environment or to human health, or substances about which information on use patterns is required."

These chemicals may become candidates for a more vigorous investigation, Brydon said.

Included in this category are the bromobenzenes, bromoethylenes, chloroethanes, chloroethers and chloroethylenes which are all solvents; chloronaphthalenes, chlorotoluenes and di- and triethanolamine which are commercial chemicals; hexachlorobutadiene which is used in the rubber industry; isocyanates and polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons, the products of inefficient combustion of gas, oil and coal.

A Chance To Beef

TORONTO (CP) — A new book, titled The Way Ahead for Canada, makes a scathing attack on the federal government's recent white paper on Canada's future.

The soft-cover book contains the government document, the opinions of a variety of experts and questionnaire that lets readers get into the act.

Readers are instructed to mail in their responses to the prime minister's office which has made special provisions for receiving them, says editor Robert Logan, a physics professor at the University of Toronto and chairman for Ontario of the federal Liberal party's policy committee.

GOV'T PENSION STUDY

OTTAWA (CP) — An outside consulting firm has been hired to investigate the government's civil service pension plans and compare the benefits with those available in the private sector, Treasury Board President Robert Andras said Monday. Andras said Tomenson-Alexander Associates has been asked to "test, check and evaluate the assumptions and calculations" in a government study tabled in the Commons last fall.

GOVERNOR TO VETO KING DAY

The sponsor of the measure, the Senate's only black member, said the veto by Godwin, a Republican now ending his second term as governor, would "incense" blacks across the state and drive them to the polls in overwhelming numbers to vote for a Democrat to replace Godwin in the November elections.

Godwin, who has sought to project a progressive image on racial matters as governor, announced the veto at a news conference where he also disclosed that despite some misgivings, he will sign legislation that will block the state's cities from annexing any suburban territory for another 10 years.

Although most public attention had been focused on what Godwin would do with the annexation measure, his veto of the Martin Luther King holiday bill is expected to be more controversial. The bill had been offered by Sen. L. Douglas Wilder (D - Richmond) and had passed both houses of the legislature by lopsided margins and with virtually no debate.

In an effort to forestall controversy over the measure, King's birthday would have been celebrated Jan. 1 although King was born Jan. 15. By celebrating it on Jan. 1, state workers would not be given an extra paid holiday, supporters of the bill said.

But Godwin, who was leading segregationist forces in the Virginia legislature, said, "We have enough legal holidays in Virginia."

20 Million Shots Aimed

WASHINGTON (WP) — A new federal program to immunize 20 million children aged 14 and under against seven serious infectious diseases will be announced today by U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano Jr.

The aim will be to combat a rapid increase in cases of measles caused by a sharp lag in immunizations and to prevent such an increase in cases of polio, diphtheria, rubella (or German measles), whooping cough, tetanus and mumps.

Another goal, said an informed health official, who declined to be named, will be "to jack up public interest in immunizations, which has suffered, fairly or unfairly, because of what happened in swine flu."

Speakers at a national immunization conference at the National Institute of Health Monday repeatedly stressed the need for a new national effort to vaccinate the unprotected and restore public credibility in vaccinations.

HEW officials Monday were still completing final details of their new vaccination program, Dr. James Dickson III, acting assistant secretary for health, told the conferees.

The object, other health officials said in interviews, will be to reach two primary groups — some 13 million children at or above the poverty level and another 7 million in higher-income groups.

Most Lights Go Off In Portland Blackout

PORTLAND (AP) — Oregon governor Bob Straub asked everybody in downtown Portland to turn off their outside and inside lights for 20 minutes Monday night, and most people did.

It was devised as a means of drawing attention to the electricity shortage that looms in the Pacific northwest.

The Bonneville power Administration, because of a lack of snowpack in the mountains and inadequate water supplies in reservoirs behind hydroelectric dams, had asked for a 10-per-cent cutback in electricity use. But the request went largely unheeded.

The Oregon governor thought something more dramatic was needed.

"You've got to dramatize it to make people see it and feel it," Straub said, adding that his idea was no gimmick.

"We've got 600 people out of work right now because of the energy shortage," the governor said. 'Is that a gimmick?"

The outside lights at such diverse establishments as Mary's Topless Club and the Christian Science reading room flickered off.

The over-all visual impact of the blackout was effective, mostly because Straub received co-operation from corporations that occupy the city's giant skyscrapers, such as the Georgia-Pacific Corp. and the Standard Insurance Co.

NANTUCKET WANTS OUT

NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP) — Nantucket residents made it clear in a 4-to-1 referendum vote Monday that they mean their threat to secede from Massachusetts.

"What started as a lark is something people are taking seriously now," said Wayne Holmes, Nantucket town meeting moderator, after town meetings resulted in a 1,725-to-404 vote in favor of secession.

The vote was nonbinding and no one expects the resort and its equally unhappy neighbor, Martha's Vineyard, to quit the state immediately —if ever.

But political leaders representing the 13,000 people living on the two island counties off Cape Cod feel they now have a strong weapon in their fight to retain representatives in the state legislature.

The islands have had their representatives since 1696, but a new reapportionment amendment threatens to merge the islands with the mainland district of about 300,000 people.

State Representative John Conway (Rep. Nantucket) said he and the Martha's Vineyard representative, Terence McCarthy, want a meeting with Massachusetts' Gov. Michael Dukakis to discuss the referendum.

New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut and Rhode Island have expressed interest in having the counties join them.

$50M Drug Ring Run From Jail

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirty persons have been indicted in what authorities said was a $50-million-a-year drug ring that stretched from Asia to New York and was allegedly operated from a jail cell by a man serving a 70-year prison sentence for narcotics violations.

Frank Lucas and 29 members of his alleged crime family were indicted Monday on charges of running the drug ring that handled every phase of heroin dealing, from importing to street sales.

Lucas is alleged to have controlled the ring by speaking in code with visitors to his cell in the Essex County Jail, Newark, N.J. He now is serving his sentence in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

All of those indicted are related by blood or marriage and come from North Carolina, said Queens District Attorney John Santucci.

Santucci and Special City Narcotics Prosecutor Sterling Johnson estimated the ring handled one kilogram of heroin a week between August, 1975, and last October for a yearly total of $50 million.

BAGMAN FINED

BALTIMORE (WP) — J. Walter Jones, a prominent Maryland banker once described by federal prosecutors as a "bagman" for kickbacks to Spiro Agnew, was fined $5,000 and sentenced to three months imprisonment Monday for soliciting an illegal corporation contribution to the 1972 Republican presidential campaign.

Union, Firm Join Fight On Cancer

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — A union and a manufacturing company have for the first time joined efforts to fund medical research seeking a way to help asbestos workers with a "ticking time bomb" of cancer.

Dr. Irving Selikoff of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York said there are an estimated one million asbestos workers in the United States today and history suggests one of every 15 will eventually die of a previously rare cancer called mesothelioma.

"Is this inevitable?" he asked in a report released today at an American Cancer Society seminar. "Must we look to 2,000 or more deaths each year of mesothelioma, well into the next century?"

Mesothelioma is an invariably fatal cancer of the lining of the chest or abdomen. It is not the only cancer problem asbestos workers face. Many who smoke also will develop lung cancer. But because so little is known about mesothelioma, the research project is aimed at that disease.

A program at Mount Sinai was started recently with $250,000 grants each from the Asbestos Workers International Union and the Johns-Manville Corp., a major maker of asbestos products.

Sleepwear Risk Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Consumer Product Safety Commission is trying to evaluate the risks of a chemical widely used in children's sleepwear to ee whether it should be taken off the market.

"There isn't much doubt that Tris is carcinogenic," commission chairman S. John Byington told a House of Representatives subcommittee on Monday.

But he said the commission must evaluate the risks before taking any action. "If it is determined to be hazardous, it will be removed from the market," he said.

Tris, found to cause cancer in laboratory rats and mice, is used in the manufacturing of children's polyester sleepwear.

Guzzler Image Worries Rolls

DETROIT (UPI) — Price tags on some Rolls-Royce cars range up to $90,000, so another $500 or so for a "gas guzzler" tax should not bother Rolls-Royce dealers, but it does.

"Our cars are better in every respect, but there are many things in common. They have four wheels and a motor like everyone else's cars. And they use gasoline," said George Lewis, president of Rolls-Royce Motors, Inc.

Lewis has been setting sales records for the luxury car firm in the U.S. — 1,230 automobiles in 1976 and an expected 1,400 this year. He's concerned that any tax on large cars—like the one being considered by President Carter — would change the way Americans think of luxury cars.

"A gas-guzzler tax would be like a cloud over our heads," Lewis said. "It wouldn't hurt our sales, though."

What might happen, Lewis admits, is that people may not want to drive any car that is not socially acceptable. That, he says, would happen only if Americans change their whole way of living.

"When the luxury car is no longer acceptable, a lot of other things will have to go, things like yachts, private planes and anything that makes one guy different from another," Lewis said. "There are some people who would like to homogenize it so everyone would drive the same kind of car."

The Rolls-Royce lineup now averages 12 miles per gallon in the government's tests — in line with other "luxury" models though below the Cadillac Seville and the Lincoln Versailles, the two most expensive U.S. cars.

The British auto firm sells more of its automobiles in this country than in the United Kingdom and is keeping up heavy, elegant walnut veneer models — a $49,000 Silver Wraith II and a $43,200 Silver Shadow II that weighs 4,995 pounds to rank it among the heaviest cars sold in the U.S. It's also rated at 12 m.p.h. — among the lowest.

Lewis says Rolls-Royce could go the way of lower-priced cars and shave weight to save fuel. But then the car might not be a Rolls-Royce.

It might not have the heavy, elegant walnut veneer trim that comes from hand-selected trees from Italy's Lombardy Plain. Or a transmission that automatically shifts itself to "park" when the ignition key is removed, and a self-emptying ashtray.

Seaway Re-Opens

MONTREAL (CP) — A 479-foot Norwegian motor vessel became the first ship of the season to start up the St. Lawrence Seaway, carrying coffee, tea and canned fruit from Africa en route to Toronto. The Monday opening is the second earliest in the history of the Seaway. In 1975, it opened on March 25.

Arms Rebuff 'No Surprise'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief U.S. arms negotiator Paul Warnke says he is not surprised the Russians did not immediately accept the "dramatic new approach" of equality in the U.S. arms curb proposal last week.

Warnke told a House of Representatives international relations subcommittee Monday he is still optimistic of reaching agreement.

"I don't think we could have anticipated that the Soviet Union in the space of three days would have been able to respond affirmatively to a dramatic new approach," he said.

"I think the ball is in their court now, and I think it is up to them now to come back with some responsive answer."

Meanwhile, State Secretary Cyrus Vance told the cabinet on Monday he does not believe any U.S. miscalculation was involved in the Russian rejection of the U.S. strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) proposal.

Vance told reporters on Sunday: "No one could say that one never makes any miscalculations. I think we proceeded in a fair and appropriate way. I hope that in the long run people will see that that is the fact."

Warnke said the purpose of the U.S. proposal was to set out the concept that both sides should have equal numbers of nuclear weapons and to get SALT moving again.

He said the U.S. proposal sets out the concept that both countries should have equal over-all numbers of weapons that can deliver nuclear bombs and warheads, but the level is open to negotiation.

Team Canada Off to War in Europe

TORONTO (CP) — General manager Derek Holmes said most of Team Canada's players arrived Monday, a day before their trip to Europe, full of enthusiasm for a chance to represent their country in the world hockey championship.

"A lot of them never thought they would represent their country," said Holmes, 37, also the team's assistant coach along with Phil Esposito of New York Rangers.

While many of the 23 players prepared for tonight's trip to Goteborg, Sweden, for the start of an eight-game exhibition schedule, coach Johnny Wilson had a brief reunion with his family in Detroit after winding up the regular season in Denver on Sunday night with his Colarado Rockies.

"It's pretty hard to analyse it at this stage," Wilson, 47, said in a telephone interview when asked about the team. "I would like to reserve my analysis until after we've played some exhibition games."

Canada pulled out of the world hockey competition early in 1970 after the International Ice Hockey Federation rejected a previous decision which would have allowd the country to use nine pros.

However, Canada renewed international play with European teams, culminating with the Canada Cup tournament last fall. In order for the Canada Cup tournament to be held, Canada had to agree to send a team to this year's championship in Vienna and to post a $100,000 bond to guarantee the club's appearance.

Other teams taking part in the Vienna tournament, scheduled to begin April 21, are defending champion Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union, the United States, West Germany, Sweden, Finland and Romania.

On the opening day, Canada will meet the U.S., then take on Sweden the following day. Canada opens its exhibition schedule Thursday against the Swedish nationals.

At this stage all the players on the early roster are from National Hockey League teams.

The goaltenders are: Gilles Meloche, Cleveland; Jim Rutherford, Detroit Red Wings; John Davidson, New York Rangers.

The forwards are: Guy Charron, Washington Capitals; Walt McKenchnie, Detroit; Wilf Paiement, Colorado; Dennis Maruk, Al MacAdam, Wayne Merrick, Bob Murdoch and Ralph Klassen, Cleveland; Rod Gilbert, Esposito, Rangers; Don Lever and Dennis Ververgaert, Vancouver, and Ron Ellis, who quit the NHL after the 1974-75 season with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Greschner was chosen Monday to replace Bob Stewart of the Barons who suffered an ankle injury during the final weekend of the regular season.

The average is 26.4 age years.

Team Canada officials are expected to add six to 10 players when teams are eliminated from the first-round NHL playoffs. Also, it is expected that goaltender John Garrett and right winger Mark Napier of Birmingham Bulls of the World Hockey Association may join Team Canada in Europe.

The team must announce its final roster of 20 players for the world tournament by noon, April 20.

Joe Crozier, general manager of the WHA Calgary Cowboys, isn't happy about the selections.

"It seems to me that most of the players picked so far are clients of Allan Eagleson," Crozier said Monday. "What's he trying to do—keep them all happy?

"I'm afraid it's going to turn out like the Canada Cup series. All the WHA had was one player, Bobby Hull, and there was no way he could be left off."

Eagleson, chairman of Team Canada and executive director of the NHL Players Association, said: "It did not help any player if he happened to be my client. The players were chosen by Holmes and Bill Watters, the team's assistant general manager, after consultation with several general managers in the NHL and WHA."

Watters said: "Rest assured, this team will be competitive. The team will be comprised of the best-conditioned professional athletes Canada has ever sent to Europe."

Jack Knows How Arnie Felt—15 Years Later

The weekend in review:

And yet another swinger has joined the new breed of golf professionals who are taking over where seemingly the Arnold Palmers, the Jack Nicklauses and the Johnny Millers have left off. (Or are they only resting until this week's masters tournament in Augusta, Ga.?)

Danny Edwards is the latest young man to come out of the pack. He won the Greensboro Open Sunday like the good thing he was with his closing round of 72 to jump right into that same Masters. What a jump for a previous non-winner on the tour!

It brings to mind a story that appeared in a New York paper last week that may serve to illustrate just what is taking place.

It seems that when Nicklaus was playing a practice game with Bruce Lietzke, another of the new lions, last week, Nicklaus hit a one iron to the green on a long par-three hole. Lietzke then stopped up and hit a three iron inside Jack's tee shot.

"Right then," said Nicklaus, "I knew what Arnie Palmer felt like 15 years ago." That's right. That's when Nicklaus first showed up at Augusta, when Arnie's army was marching through Georgia.

So all the young bucks will be shooting for that big one, but the Masters is so often something different. And the betting is it won't be an Edwards, or a Lietzke, but maybe one of the old guard like a Tom Weiskopf, or a Hale Irwin, or a Ray Floyd or maybe even Fat Jack. He has a habit of being there in the big ones.

Another year, and another loss in world curling. It's beginning to get monotonous. But there wasn't any doubt on Sunday as to who was the steadier of the two skips in the final, Jim Ursel of Montreal or young Ragnar Kamp of Sweden. The Swedish youth showed remarkable poise in the playoff and was fully deserving of his victory . . . Oh well, next year it's back in Canada, and the word is out. Make those reservations early. As the curling capital of the world, Winnipeg certainly won't let this one pass by without filling the arena as Regina did in 1973 when the Silver Broom competition was last held in Canada. Oh yes, Sweden won that one, too!

Well, the Canucks didn't make it in the final run to the wire in their playoff search last week, blowing that game to the Colorado Rockies on Friday night. But think of the great teams that beat them in the Smythe Division. Minnesota and Chicago both closed out the regular season as far from prime contenders — by losing their final two games. The Hawks don't appear to have much chance against the Islanders in their first playoff test while Buffalo Sabres should be odds-on to get by the North Stars. Los Angeles Kings should have a slight edge over Atlanta Flames, but where the upset possibility looms is in the Toronto-Pittsburgh get-together. The Leafs could shock the Penguins, who will have a home-ice advantage. Both finished with 81 points.

Even though the hockey season is starting all over again, the baseball season is about to begin. And there appears to be much interest in town over the Seattle Mariners. It's just like having our very own major league club, and Seattle isn't a bad place to spend a weekend, either. For those wanting to make plans to see the Mariners, by now you should have received in the post a ticket-application folder. If you didn't, and want one, the Mariners will be only too happy to oblige and the postal address is P.O. Box 4100, Seattle, Wash. 98104 . . . And a reminder to the caller who asked: the Yankees are at Seattle, May 11-12 and also Aug. 5-7. It all starts Wednesday, the Mariners against the California Angels in the American League opener at the Kingdome at 7:35 p.m.

Otherwise, think what sprinter Johnny Jones must feel like. The U.S. runner cracked the world record by dashing 100 metres in 9.85 seconds Saturday but a $15,000 clock suddenly didn't work. The record won't count even though he was timed in hand-held watches for the distance. It was only last year that the International Amateur Athletic Federation established the new guidelines that demand electronic timing for all races of 400 metres and under for those times to be accepted. So time marches on and Jones will have to do it all over again, if he can, and try and forget this world-record breakdown.

Judging by the results of the New Westminster Bruins-Victoria Cougars WCHL playoff series, it could be the Victoria Shamrocks will be getting into Memorial Arena sooner than expected . . . And last year's rookie, Norm Baker jr., is eagerly looking forward to his sophomore season and feels that the deal bringing Gerry Cadwallader to the Irish will pay off in more ways than one. Baker feels that Cadwallader is the rugged type of performer who just may give the Irish a little more clout. And you can take that literally, or figuratively, G'nite all.

Hawks, North Stars Looking for Upsets

By The Associated Press

The Stanley Cup playoffs get under way tonight with the big guns—Montreal Canadiens, Philadelphia Flyers and Boston Bruins—on the sidelines and the little guns—Minnesota North stars and Chicago Black Hawks—raring to go.

"I don't mind playing them because they play a fairly tight defensive game," said Chicago coach Bill White of New York Islanders, the Hawks' first-round opponent. "If you can get any breaks and score a few goals, they're not that explosive."

"Some clubs in the past have been known to pull surprises in the playoffs," said coach Ted Harris, whose North Stars meet Buffalo Sabres.

With division winners Montreal, Philadelphia, Boston and St. Louis Blues getting first-round byes, the playoffs start tonight with four games. The Islanders host Chicago, the Sabres entertain the North Stars, Los Angeles Kings welcome Atlanta Flames and Pittsburgh Penguins play host to Toronto Maple Leafs.

All are best-of-three series.

Both the Hawks, who have the worst record among the league's 12 playoff clubs, and the North Stars, only one point better, have high hopes of scoring upsets.

The Islanders compiled 106 points over the regular season, 43 more than the Hawks. But White says that doesn't matter.

"The playoffs are different," he said. "Forget about the past. They're not going to change their game in the playoffs. And they'll be thinking about the last game we played, the 2-2 tie. We outplayed them for 57 minutes until they got two goals to tie at the end."

The Islanders don't seem concerned about Chicago.

"If we play our game there's no problem," said goalie Chico Resch.

The North Stars finished 40 points behind Buffalo and are hoping to make up for a difference in personnel with youthful enthusiasm. Minnesota, which starts eight rookies, has the least experienced club in the playoffs.

"I've never seen a playoff game, even on television," said Swedish forward Roland Eriksson.

"The last time I was in a playoff was in college," added team-mate Steve Jensen.

Pittsburgh and Toronto both finished one game above .500 but the Penguins got the home-ice advantage by virtue of more victories.

"Home ice means a lot because the guys always play well here," said Pittsburgh goalie Denis Herron. "If we had to play in Toronto it would be tough."

Los Angeles coach Bob Pulford is wary of playing anyone in a short series.

"They're deadly, those best-of three series," he said.

DELESALLE TAKES FIFTH

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Philip Delesalle of Victoria finished fifth in men's competition at the Riga-77 international gymnastics competition won by Vladimir Tikhonov of the Soviet Union.

Tikhonov, a silver medallist at the Montreal Olympics last year, finished with 57 points. Hisato Igarashi of Japan was second with 56.25 and Ferenc Donat of Hungary placed third with 55.9.

Table Tennis Titles Decided

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuter) — Pak Yung Sun of North Korea retained the women's singles title and Mitsuru Kohno of Japan took the men's crown in the finals of the world table tennis championships.

The North Korean took the women's title with a 21-5, 24-22, 22-20, win over Chang Li of China. Khono beat China's Kuo Yao-Hua 17-21, 21-9, 21-19, 21-13.

Gottfried Upset By Stan Smith

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Stan Smith upset top-seeded Brian Gottfried 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 Monday in the final of the $150,000 Pacific Southwest tennis championships. Gottfried, 25, had won 37 of his last 40 matches.

Smith picked up $27,000 for dethroning the defending champion. Gottfried pushed his earnings for the year to more than $100,000 with a $13,500 runner-up cheque.

Lafleur Takes Pearson Award

TORONTO (CP) — Guy Lafleur, the outstanding Montreal Canadiens right winger, has been named winner of the Lester B. Pearson award for the second straight year.

The award is given annually to the player judged to have contributed most to hockey during the season, and the voting is done by members of the National Hockey League Players' Association.

"He's a hockey player's hockey player," said Alan Eagleson, NHLPA executive director, in announcing the award winner Monday. "He's the guy the players think deserve it."

Lafleur won the NHL scoring title for the second year in a row, scoring 56 goals and collecting 136 points and the Art Ross Trophy which goes to the league scoring champion.

Lafleur also set records for most points by a winger, most assists by a winger — 80 — and longest consecutive games scoring streak in which he picked up at least one point — 28.

He was named on 138 ballots in voting done by the NHLPA members. Runner-up was Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles Kings with 111 votes. Toronto Maple Leaf defenceman Borje Salming was third with 43 votes with Montreal defenceman Larry Robinson finishing fourth with 35.

Lafleur was also named winner of the Molson Cup, for the third time, Monday. The Cup is awarded to the player earning most three-star selections at Canadien games. Jacques Lemaire was runner-up.

Underdog Cents Take Battle Against Tigers

By The Canadian Press

In a classic case of the underdog emerging as the victor, Calgary Centennials won a hard-earned 4-3 victory at home over Medicine Hat Tigers Monday night to sweep their best-of-seven Western Canada Hockey League quarter-final series in four straight games.

The Tigers had finished the regular season on top of the Central division with a 32-28-12 record. The Centennials were fourth place finishers in the division with a 22-35-15 record.

Calgary had been given little chance of knocking over Medicine Hat's pennant-winners.

In other quarter-final games Monday night, Portland Winterhawks edged Kamloops Chiefs 5-4 to lead their series 2-1. Lethbridge Broncos defeated Saskatoon Blades 4-2 to even their series 2-2. Winnipeg Monarchs scored a 5-3 win over Brandon Wheat Kings to take a 1-0 series lead.

At Calgary, the Centennials led 3-1 after the first period and 4-2 after 40 minutes.

Jim Nill, Brian Hill and Tom Bast replied for the Tigers, who were assessed nine of 16 minor penalties.

Jerry Price faced 40 shots in the Calgary nets and kept the Centennials in the game in the second period when the Tigers outshot them 18-7. Tigers' goaltender Peter Peeters faced 38 shots.

Lethbridge took 11 of 16 minor penalties and each club picked up one major. The game's only misconduct went to Fynn.

The series resumes Wednesday at Saskatoon.

Players Decide Jabbar the Best

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For the fifth time in the past seven years, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has been chosen the National Basketball Association's player of the year.

In a poll of 215 players by the Sporting News, Abdul-Jabbar, in his second season with Los Angeles Lakers, received 125 votes. His closest rival, Bill Walton of Portland Trail Blazers, got 24.

Abdul-Jabbar received the same honor in 1971, 1972, 1974 and 1976.

The Sporting News said he also has been chosen as the centre on the league's first all-star team.

Also selected to the first team all-stars were forwards George McGinnis and Julius Erving of Philadelphia 76ers, Pete Maravich of New Orleans Jazz as one guard and Paul Westphal of Phoenix Suns as the other guard.

Clippers Trail by Two

RICHMOND — Richmond Sockeyes can win a berth in the Centennial Cup playoffs by beating Nanaimo Clippers on Wednesday.

Sockeyes, the Pacific Coast Junior Hockey League champions, topped B.C. Junior League-champion Clippers 5-1 here Monday to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five provincial playoff.

The third game is scheduled for Nanaimo.

The third period was halted for about eight minutes when fans began throwing refuse at the Clippers, who retaliated with a little stick-swinging. No one was injured and order was restored by the RCMP.

Squash Triumph

LONDON (Reuter) — Australian Geoff Hunt, the world squash racquets champion, won the British open championship Monday when he defeated countryman Cam Nancarrow 9-4, 9-1, 8-10, 9-4 in the final at Wembley.

Memorial Fund

Officials of the Saanich Braves junior "B" hockey team have started a Brent Patterson Memorial Fund.

The 21-year-old player died early Saturday morning several hours after participating in a provincial championship game in Quesnel. Patterson complained of chest pains during the game and died in hospital several hours later of an apparent heart attack.

Contributions to the fund may be made through Ray's Sports Shop on Douglas Street or at P. J. Novelties on Quadra Street.

Funeral services for Patterson will be held at 3 p.m. Thursday at Sands Memorial Chapel.

Rest Break Is Important For Ferguson's Future

Your name is Cec Ferguson. You're closing in on birthday No. 27 and you're being sponsored to play in professional golf tournaments by a Victoria syndicate.

The arrangement is one of mutual admiration.

The hometown benefactors are impressed with the way you hit the ball as an amateur and feel you deserve a chance to trot with the pros. You thought about it, and now that the opportunity is available your ultimate intention is to repay the sponsors by winning. It's a universal aim. You're not the only pro who wants to direct the Brinks' trucks to an appreciative syndicate.

Winning, in a big way, takes time.

Even so, success has been reasonable. In seven months, you've claimed almost $16,000 in winnings. Approximately $550 a week. Sounds good to innocent bystanders. They aren't aware of the initial expenses involved and that $16,000 has taken you to only about two-thirds of the way to the break-even line.

The syndicate knows. But because you're Cec Ferguson, you're sorry it hasn't been $160,000. In lieu of the extra digit, you play fair.

That's why you're back home for three weeks. Not to whoop it up with hometown chums, but to rest.

"After a week at home," you say, "I already feel great. I'll practice here for two weeks, then get back into the tournament thing with an American Golf Tour event near Kansas City.

"You have to rest some time, and the middle of the season is no time to do it. I needed a rest and felt I had to break now because the PGA school is important. It's in Pinehurst, North Carolina, in June.

"We don't want to play the mini-tour forever. They're great as fill-ins but not the same as getting that players' card and trying the PGA circuit.

"I want to be rested, mentally and physically, when I try for that card. In my last tournament in Alabama, I felt I hit the ball well enough but pushed myself too much. I was cranky and irritable.

"I've gone through it before . . . playing golf and not enjoying it. I don't want to go through that again, certainly not in the summer when the good tournaments are coming up.

"Technically, there are no major problems. Like I said, I'm not hitting the ball all that badly. I'm not completely satisfied with hitting the ball from left to right. I'd rather go back to hitting a controlled draw instead of the fade.

"But, hey, everything is just great. And I'm still enthused, perhaps more than ever.

"I think I was pretty good as an amateur in Canada. Now I want to be recognized in Canada as a good pro . . . as they recognize George Knudson or Stan Leonard. That's the thing that really drives me . . ."

VIDA BLUE
. . . claims promise broken

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Pitcher Vida Blue, saying he is fed up, quit Oakland A's spring training camp Monday.

"I'm fed up with the man," the one-time Cy Young Award winner said, referring to the A's owner Charles O. Finley. "I just can't take this any longer."

Blue, 27, said he had bought a plane ticket and would take a flight out Tuesday from Phoenix.

In Chicago, Finley said: "I can't figure out why he would do that. I haven't talked to his agent, Chris Daniels, either. I can comment no further."

Blue says Finley reneged on a promise last June that culminated in his ill-fated package sale along with Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers.

Last June 14, Blue signed a contract with Oakland and Finley was reported to have promised he would never sell him to another major league club.

The next day, Finley announced the Blue-Rudi-Fingers deal, which would have sent Blue to New York Yankees for $1.5 million and Rudi and Fingers to Boston Red Sox for $1 million each.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn voided the deal and was upheld in court.

Melton Hot

By The Associated Press

Cleveland Indians acquired one-time American League home run king Bill Melton from California Angels during the winter, but nobody really knew why.

Buddy Bell had a lock on third base, Boog Powell and Andre Thornton were going to platoon at first and Johnny Grubb, an expensive trade acquisition from San Diego Padres, was joining forces with Rick Manning and Charlie Spikes in the outfield.

But with a .300 batting average that includes seven homers and 20 runs batted in, Melton, 31, not only made the club but was selected the Indians' outstanding player during the exhibition campaign.

And luckily for the Indians, he was around when Grubb tore up a knee. That enabled Robinson to switch Bell to left field with Melton moving in at third base.

Melton had a single in two at-bats Monday as the Indians dropped an 8-7 decision to Chicago Cubs. Larry Biittner singled home the winning run with his third hit of the game to cap a two-run ninth-inning rally.

Philadelphia's Jerry Martin belted a grand slam homer Monday and Steve Carlton tuned up for opening day with five scoreless innings in a 5-1 triumph over the White Sox.

Oilers Get Jump In Playoff Bid

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers whipped Winnipeg Jets 6-2 Monday night to put the pressure on Calgary Cowboys in the race for fourth place and the last playoff spot in the Western Division of the World Hockey Association.

Led by veteran Norm Ullman, who turned in a strong two-way game and set up a pair of important goals, the Oilers moved two points ahead of the Cowboys.

Calgary, which meets Birmingham Bulls tonight and Winnipeg Thursday, has a game in hand. But the Cowboys cannot finish fourth if Edmonton defeats Birmingham at home Wednesday night.

Ullman drew an assist on playing coach Glen Sather's winning goal midway through the second period. He also fed Randy Rota a perfect pass in the final period for the last Edmonton goal, Rota's second.

Dauphin Awarded Title As Brawl Ends Series

WINNIPEG (CP) — Bill Addison, commissioner of the Manitoba Junior Hockey League, has awarded the league championship to Dauphin Kings.

The finals series between Dauphin and Kildonan North Stars was suspended indefinitely Sunday night when a brawl broke out during the warmup period.

Addison said he awarded the title to the Kings because they had a 2-1 edge in the first three games of what was intended to be a best-of-seven series.

Addison made the decision on his own in an apparent reversal of his earlier statement that the matter would go before the league and the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association.

The decision means Dauphin will represent Manitoba in a series with this year's title-holder in the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League.

Two Dauphin players were injured in Sunday night's melee. Lyle Stokotelny suffered a severe cut on his forehead, and Harvey Takvam spent the night in a Winnipeg hospital after being knocked unconscious.

Police were called to the arena and the game was eventually called off.

Two members of the Kildonan team were ordered to appear in court April 12, but no specific charges had been laid by Monday afternoon.

FORMER SOCCER STAR GORD BELL DIES AT 65

A private family funeral service was held Monday for R. Gordon Bell, a long-time Victoria resident who is regarded as one of the finest soccer players ever developed here.

In addition to establishing local and provincial recognition in soccer, Bell played for Canada in international competition in the 1939 World's Fair at San Francisco.

Survivors include his wife, Cleda; two daughters, Mrs. Margaret Mallory and Miss Shirley Bell, and two brothers, Jack of Qualicum Beach and Bob of Victoria, president of the Victoria and District Golf Committee.

Hammers Get A Big Point

LONDON (CP) — West Ham United gained a valuable point in their struggle to avoid relegation from the English League's First Division soccer league by playing to a 1-1 draw away with Queen's Park Rangers Monday night.

West Ham is still at the bottom of the division standings on goal difference, but the draw drew them level with Sunderland and Bristol City, all with 23 points.

Saanich Finishes In Tie for Fifth

VERNON — Saanich Braves finished in a tie for fifth place with Trail in the British Columbia peewee hockey championships at the weekend.

Dolphin Tackle Receives Award

Todd Peterson, a defensive tackle with Victoria Dolphins of the B.C. Big Four Junior Football League, was selected for one of the major awards at a development camp held at Vancouver by the professional British Columbia Lions.

Peterson, 17, received a trophy as the best defensive lineman during the week-long camp that was attended by 120 young players, including 13 from Vancouver Island.

Records Tumbled In WCHL Point Race

Bill Derlago of Brandon Wheat Kings won the Western Canada Hockey League scoring race this year by more points than any other player in the 11-year history of the league.

Derlago, 18, a centre, finished the season with 96 goals and 82 assists for 178 points, 41 points more than his linemate, Ray Allison, who had 45 goals and 92 assists for 137 points.

In third place was another Brandon player, rookie Brian Propp, who had 55 goals and 80 assists for 135 points.

Bobby Clarke of Flin Flon enjoyed the biggest previous edge, 37 points, over his teammate Reg Leach, when he totalled 168 points in 1967-68.

Propp's 80 assists were also a record for a rookie, beating by one the mark set by Calgary's Tom Serviss in 1968-69.

Kevin McCarthy of Winnipeg Monarchs entered the record book twice. His 127 points broke his own mark of 121 set last year and his 105 assists constituted a new mark for defencemen.

Derlago's 96 goals were also a new mark, breaking the previous standard of 90 set by Ron Chipperfield of the Wheat Kings in 1974. All-time points record holder is Bernie Federko of Saskatoon Blades who had 187 points in 1975-76.

ICBC Surcharge Urged to Pay For Legal Aid

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lawyer suggested Monday that a surcharge be added to Insurance Corp. of British Columbia auto insurance policies to establish a fund to provide legal assistance to people having trouble with the corporation.

Dave Mossop of the Vancouver Community Legal Assistance Society made the suggestion in a brief to a public hearing of the B.C. Legal Services Commission.

Mossop indentified 12 citizens groups he said are not being adequately served by the legal system, and one of the groups is the thousands of clients of the government-owned ICBC.

For this group, Mossop suggested adding a $1 surcharge to every auto insurance policy and using the funds generated to set up an advocacy program for those having problems with ICBC. The program would be run by the legal services commission and would have access to ICBC files.

Mossop said the surcharge system also could be used as a built-in legal care program in many areas where middle-income people find themselves in trouble over a legal problem.

"An all-encompassing, compulsory pre-paid legal services scheme at this time seems economically unfeasible and might create bureaucratic problems rivalling ICBC," he said.

"Instead, our solution of surcharges is an attempt to provide universal legal services in a restricted area of the law of fundamental concern to the average working person — his house and his car."

He said surcharges also could be applied to real estate deals to help middle-income earners deal with foreclosure or other property-related actions.

Other groups identified in the society's brief as being underserviced are:

—Immigrants, who often have a language barrier and a problem over different concepts of law;

—Senior citizens, who have an immense problem when it comes to dealing with bureaucracies;

—Unemployment insurance recipients, because of the complexities of the Unemployment Insurance Act;

—Union members who claim they don't get proper protection and representation;

—Tenants, whose problems don't warrant hiring a lawyer;

—Social assistance recipients who need to appeal a ruling;

—Mental patients;

—Workers' compensation claimants;

—Groups of citizens promoting particular interests;

The public hearings conclude today.

Commission chairman D. E. Jabour said a report and recommendations should take about six weeks.

Quebec to Attend

QUEBEC (CP) — Energy Minister Guy Joron will attend the federal-provincial energy conference in Ottawa this week to present Quebec's stand on the federal government's crude oil and natural gas pricing policies, the minister announced Monday.

Two Deals For B.C. Woodchips

VANCOUVER (CP) — A deferred chip deal with a European firm resulted in two deals recently as British Columbia attempts to whittle down a stockpile of woodchips estimated between 700,000 and 1.3 million bone dry units.

Henry Wakabayashi, president of Pacific Liaicon Ltd., explained Monday how he acte on behalf of B.C. producer groups to develop the sales.

Originally, there was a chip agreement with Massiamdustrims Virkesimport A.B. of Sweden for chips offered by Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd., but the deal was deferred.

Wakabayashi said he sent a sample of chips to the Japanese Daishowa International paper firm, who ultimately placed an order, and in the meanwhile, the Swedish firm came back into the market and gave their order for 13,778 tons of chips to Crown Zellerbach.

The 7,500-ton load of spruce chips bound for Japan was supplied by two co-operative groups — North Cariboo Chip Producers Inc. and Okanagan-Mainline Independent Chip Producers Co-Operative.

The shipment, being loaded Monday aboard the vessel Daiki Maru at the Pacific Coast Terminals facility in nearby Port Moody, represents the first offshore sale of chips since the provincial government abolished its export chip levy on March 3.

WOOD-CUTTING LAWYER GUILTY

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former lawyer, now cutting firewood to keep his family together, pleaded guilty Monday in county court to converting $300,000 in investment clients' trust funds to an unauthorized use six years ago.

Milton Daniel Oliver will be sentenced April 20.

Court was told that Oliver, then a practising lawyer, also was in the financing business on behalf of persons who came to him for investment advice and placed their money in what they were told would be second mortgages paying 18 per cent or more interest.

Crown counsel Kenneth Fawcus said that various companies were formed in which the investors owned 80 per cent and Oliver owned 20 per cent. Fawcus said that in the eight charges against Oliver, the trust money was used to invest in mining and other endeavours, instead of second mortgages, and the money was eventually lost.

Oliver told Judge G. B. Ladner that he accepts full responsibility and that he "never made a cent" out of the scheme.

He said he has made concerted efforts to recoup the losses and intends to pay the investors back.

"I made a lot of money for a lot of people," he said, outlining previous successes in the second mortgage field. "I never lost on mortgages."

Oliver said that his problems began when several large mortgage firms entered the Vancouver market, driving interest rates on second mortgages down to 12 to 14 per cent.

Environment Watch by Fishing Body

VANCOUVER (CP) — Spokesmen for all sections of the British Columbia fishing industry announced Monday formation of a committee on the environment with representatives from the entire industry, including fishermen, shore workers, vessel owners and processors.

Leo Holphe, interim chairman of the committee, said in a news release that the committee was created because of concerns over environmental changes which are destoying the fisheries resource.

Discussed at the meeting Monday was the McGregor River diversion planned by B.C. Hydro, the provincially-owned utility.

"Based on the information at hand, we feel that the power and flood control benefits which could be derived from the McGregor do not balance out against the threat posed to the multi-million-dollar Fraser River salmon industry," Holphe said.

The Committee agreed to take an active role in future public discussions of the McGregor proposal, he said; in addition to becoming active in combatting other threats to the industry.

1,000 Fishermen Lose Licences

VANCOUVER (CP) — Operators of fishboats with C licences who failed to make commercial landings of fish worth $500 or more in 1975 or 1976 will not qualify for licences this year.

The fisheries and marine service said Monday up to 1,000 casual fishermen are in this category, and will be notified of the restriction.

It is part of a move to cut down on nuisance fishing by sports fishermen who circumvent regulations by obtaining the special C licence. C licences do not permit salmon fishing but permit the taking of cod, crab and other bottom species.

B.C. Tel Rapped On Rates

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Telephone Co. was criticized on various levels during a rate increase hearing Monday.

Roy Mason, B.C. Tel cost executive, agreed that the company rents one type of data trasnsmission system for $719 a month — about $320 above the minimum revenue return set by the company.

"Our major competitor rents a similar machine for $619," Mason told the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) rate hearing.

"We're already losing business because the rates are so high," he said, "but at least there's no question of having to subsidize that part of business from general revenue."

"I must say that sounds a bit exhorbitant," Christopher Johnston, general counsel for the CRTC, commented.

"I can only agree," Mason replied.

Wesley Bull, a Seattle electrical engineering company owner, said B.C. Tel may be going the wrong way in the massive job of replacing old step-by-step mechanical switching.

Bull, in a written submission as a witness for the B.C. attorney-general's department, said that the company is heavily committed to electronic common control switching when it would be wiser to await full development of the latest digital system.

A B.C. Tel spokesman, requested to make comparisons of tolls for long-distance calls over similar distances, revealed that a three-minute call between Vancouver and Princeton, costs $1.53 while a three-minute call between Vancouver and Seattle is 94 cents; and a Vancouver-New York call is about 65 cents cheaper than a Vancouver-Montreal call.

B.C. Tel is asking the CRTC for permission to raise monthly telephone bills by about 15 per cent, and to raise toll calls by 10 per cent.

$3M to Kelowna for Streets

KELOWNA (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett Monday announced a payment of $3 million to the city of Kelowna for street reconstruction as the provincial government's contribution towards amalgamation costs.

The city took in several nearby areas in amalgamation three years ago.

The premier told a news conference that similar contributions also will be made to the cities of Prince George and Kamloops, which also went through amalgamation efforts in 1974.

"An immediate government contribution, rather than a long-range series of payments, has been decided upon so that the city can not only continue with municipal street reconstruction, but can avoid the erosion of inflation within the administration of the program," said Bennett.

The premier also announced a $50,000 government contribution to the construction of a safety village on two acres of land donated by the city of Kelowna.

Alcoholism No Disease: MD

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — For a $4,000 fee, Dr. William Hull, a clinical psychologist, says he can convert an alcoholic into a social drinker.

Hull goes against most conventional theories of treating alcoholism, does not consider it a disease but rather a symptom of an inner disturbance.

That inner disturbance, he says, is derived from what he calls the Panic Suffocation Syndrome.

"It all goes back to birth," he says. "The alcoholic relieves the crisis when he fought for oxygen. The precise emotional pattern is triggered in a re-experience. To get rid of this, the alcoholic must have deep therapy."

By deep therapy, he means one-on-one counselling and none of the popular group stuff. His treatment includes hypnosis.

Hull, a mild-mannered elderly man, expresses no distaste for conventional alcoholism workers. As a matter of fact, he sometimes refers some of his clients to Alcoholics Anonymous, where the disease concept prevails.

Most traditional alcoholism experts shudder when they consider Hull's claims and fear such a theory will set off a wave of fatal drinking by alcoholics teetering on the edge of sobriety.

The same type of reaction occurred last June when the Rand Corp., a Santa Monica, Calif., think tank, reported it found in a survey that some alcoholics were able to resume normal drinking after therapy.

"Once an alcoholic, always an alcoholic," is the cry of most case workers, the traditionalists, and that also is the belief in AA.

Hull says he has been treating alcoholics for 17 years and has reached the point where he gets an 80 per cent recovery rate which is far more than others therapeutic groups claim.

He is aiming at the business executive and feels that many firms would be willing to put up the $4,000 to salvage an experienced employee who may be making decisions that now cost the company money, and may have to be dumped.

Among his successful clients, he says, are a California judge who has abandoned his compulsive drinking but imbibes at social events; and an American Indian with a long police record of drunken escapades who is now getting himself a college education and takes an occasional nip.

Hull, who used to practise in the Los Angeles area, now has a full scale treatment facility at Murrietta Hot Springs to the east in Riverside County.

For the $4,000, the client gets board and room for two weeks, counselling, medical attention if needed, and all the diversions of a resort hotel. Hull's agency, called Halre Inc., keeps in touch with the client after he leaves, checks on his progress and is available for future help if needed.

There are a few conditions in addition to the $4,000 fee. The patient must be sober upon arrival and must refrain from use of alcohol or drugs during his stay.

The patient must have also "a desire or motivation to be rid of the compulsion to drink alcohol" and that is regarded as a requirement by just about everyone who deals with alcoholics.

Seal Study May Solve Crib Death Mystery

BOSTON (UPI) — A team of doctors and scientists believes studying the breathing habits of deep-diving Antarctic seals may eventually lead to a solution of one of the world's most puzzling medical problems — Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, commonly known as crib death.

Every year, an estimated 8,200 infants die from SIDS in the United States and Canada. So far, researchers know little about what causes the deaths, which often strike normal, healthy babies.

The researchers, who have already made one trip to the Antarctic to study the Weddell seal and plan to return this fall, say data they've collected and analyzed could soon allow them to predict more accurately which infants are susceptible to the syndrome.

Using sophisticated equipment and water tanks flown to the base of an active volcano less than 800 miles from the South Pole, the scientists were able to simulate ice-cold diving conditions for several captured seals. The mammals used in the experiments showed no fear of man, as they were scooped off snow-covered ice flows by the researchers in temperatures with a wind-chill factor of 130 degrees below zero.

Found only in the Antarctic, Weddells can dive as deep as 1,500 feet to catch fish and stay underwater for more than an hour. The researchers have determined a reflex in the back of the seal's throat causes a great slowdown in its heartbeat and respiratory rate while diving.

Some believe this same reflex is the hidden cause of SIDS. When an infant chokes or vomits, the action often stimulates the back of the mouth and windpipe.

Then, as with the seals' reflex, the baby may unconsciously hold its breath and slow its heartbeat. Parents often notice the breathing slowdown if they're nearby. But if they don't within minutes, the infant dies. When a Weddell seal dives, the amount of blood which flows through its heart and lungs drops more than 80 per cent.

"Yet it doesn't go into shock, while a human being would go into shock at a drop of 50 per cent," said Dr. Warren M. Zapol of Massachusetts General Hospital. "Another remarkable thing is that a seal actually exhales before it dives, it doesn't inhale."

By careful study of the seals' reflex actions and body metabolism during dives, researchers have been able to further link its breathing habits with infants.

"If an engineer wants to build a submarine, he might look at a natural diver to see how he could do it. We did more or less the same thing," Zapol said.

Freezing Tips For Oysters

- freeze only very fresh oysters.
- wash shells thoroughly; shuck, reserving oyster juices. Wash oysters thoroughly in brine (4 tbsp. salt to 1 gallon cold water). Pack in appropriate freezer containers; cover with oyster liquid or brine (1 tbsp. salt to 1 qt. water); leave ½-inch headspace for expansion. Seal, label, date, and freeze immediately.
- thaw oysters completely for use in cocktail and salads; if using oysters in cooked dishes, thaw only enough to separate pieces.
- to defrost 1-lb. package of oysters, allow 8 hours in refrigerator, 3 hours at room temperature, or ½ hour in cold water.
- turn freezer container over several times when defrosting to distribute moisture.
- do not allow defrosted oysters to stand at room temperature.
- at O degree F, oysters can be stored up to a maximum of 3 months.

CANNED FRUIT 'DUMPED'

TORONTO (CP) — Elmer Banting, vice-president of the Canadian Food Processors Association, says Canada's low import tariffs make this country a dumping ground for canned fruits and vegetables.

The cheaper imports are hurting the domestic agricultural industry and the way some foreign goods are packaged often deceives consumers, Banting said in a recent interview from his Ottawa office.

Supermarket customers who think they are buying homegrown fruits or vegetables when they see the chain's label in the can usutlly miss the fine print on the side which says where the food was grown.

Banting said millions of man-hours have been lost by Ctnadian workers, because of cheap food imports.

indoor gardens

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: Recently, a friend of mine went to Hawaii and brought me back an Anthurium plant. It had a gorgeous red flower and dark, shiny leaves, but now, after a few weeks, the flower has wilted and the leaves are following close behind. Plant-loving friends of mine warned me this would happen and that I shouldn't expect to have too much luck with this plant, but I've always felt that where there's a will, there's a way. Is there? — P.T.

DEAR P.T.: Yes, of course, but not always when it comes to growing Anthuriums indoors. Actually, this beautiful perennial does very well in a greenhouse, but we do have friends across the country who swear that they're no more difficult to grow under normal indoor conditions than some orchid varieties. The higher the humidity, obviously, the better — the fact being that, if the humidity factor drops below 50 per cent for more than a few days, the leaves will lose their shiny luster and die.

Keep the pots on trays of moist gravel (dry wells), and for maximum effect keep them covered with plastic bags. Good light, but no direct sun, is a definite requirement and, even though YOU may wilt, these plants will grow best if the temperature is up around 90 degrees.

Protect your plant from all drafts and pot it up in a porous mix of leaf mold, sandy soil and sphagnum moss.

Over-Sheltering Bad

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to MOTHER, whose daughter was one of the few not invited to a classmate's party, missed a point I think is important.

Granted, the party invitations should not have been passed out at school unless the whole class was invited, but the incident should have been used as an object lesson. This world is full of rude and thoughtless people, and life is often a series of snubs, disappointments and frustrations, which children should learn to handle early.

Eleven-year-olds who have not learned how to deal with rejection have been over-protected, and over-protected children develop into adults who can't cope with everyday life.

Parents should not shelter their children from common occurrences, and they shouldn't be too sympathetic. And above all, they should never try to soothe injured feelings with a gift or reward.

It's too bad when a child is "left out," but when this happens — as it surely will — he shouldn't be allowed to wallow in self-pity or undulge in "get-even" tactics.

GRAMMY!

DEAR GRAMMY: You make a good point. Over-protected children do develop into adults who can't cope with life's everyday problems. But to deny or repress our true feelings instead of accepting them and dealing with them is unhealthy.

Feeling "hurt" when rejected is normal at any age, and nothing to be ashamed of. Unfortunately, our society and culture has made a taboo of crying in public.

DEAR ABBY: A friend has asked me to play "Dear Abby" and mediate a fuss between her and her husband, and I honestly don't know what to tell her.

It seems that her husband is bugged because she is always doing knitting, needlepoint or some kind of handiwork when they're watching TV or just visiting.

He says she has all day to do whatever she wants, and when he comes home, she should give him her undivided attention. He wants her to look at him while they're conversing.

She says she can hear every word he says, and she DOES look at him almost constantly, so he has no legitimate beef.

I can see his point. Abby, but I can also see hers. Do you think he has the right to ask her to quit doing needle- IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: He hasn't the right to ask her to quit. Handiwork for many (men as well as women) is therapeutic. It's relaxing and relieves tension. Tell her I said she should stick to her needlework—but look up a little more.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS
...it tells you how

Watercress always seems to be one of the most expensive items on the supermarket produce counters . . . which is ridiculous because the plant grows wild free for the pickin' across the lower half of Canada and in all 50 states of the Union.

Volunteer cress looks just like its costly supermarket cousin (it should, it's exactly the same plant) although, if anything, the plant is tastier when allowed to raise itself. You'll find the piquant greens growing in clear, fast-moving, shallow streams and you should never pull the plant up, roots and all. Instead, pinch or snip off only the leaves that extend above the water's surface. If you suspect that the stream is polluted, dissolve a purification tablet in a bowl of water and soak the cress in the fluid according to directions before you attempt to eat the greens raw. Then find out who's ruining your foraging grounds and stop them!

Place a goodly bed of the fresh cress in a large salad bowl. Cover with a layer of thinly sliced cucumbers which have been soaked in icy cold water for 15 minutes and sprinkle a scant tablespoon of minced chives over all. Lay down another tier of cucumber slices and put a border of cress around the edge. Cover the bowl and stash it in the refrigerator until just before mealtime.

Before serving this spring salad, splash it with vinegar and oil. Then add a dash of salt and pepper and toss the greenery until it's well mixed. Present this dish with the first fresh fish (broiled or fried) caught from that same stream and listen to your guests beg for more.

Canadians are among the world's foremost pill-poppers. Too many of us have become dependent on tranquilizers to face the stress of living in an ever-changing world.

Dispatch No. 42, "The Cost of Tranquility," states that since their introduction in Canada during the 1950s, tranquilizers have become the most widely prescribed group of drugs. Usually, they do relieve abnormal anxiety and tension, but if they are taken in doses larger than prescribed, they become hazardous. For instance, while you take tranquilizers, you should never consume alcohol because your tolerance for alcohol decreases if you take tranquilizers at the same time.

According to the leaflet, the most common hazard of constantly using tranquilizers is psychological dependence. Nobody should get into the habit of trying to cope with everyday problems only with the help of a drug.

The leaflet also poses several questions which enable readers to check their attitude towards drug use in general and the use of tranquilizers in particular. If you answer yes to most of the questions, you already rely excessively on drugs.

Extra Egg Daily Not Injurious —Researcher

OTTAWA — The consumption of one extra egg every day won't affect the cholesterol level of inactive men with normal cholesterol levels. If you exercise regularly and still eat more than an egg a day you might even "lose" cholesterol.

That was the message delivered to the 4th annual Canadian Egg Producers conference in Ottawa last week by Dr. A. Hafez Ismail, director of research at Purdue University's department of physical education, health and recreation studies, who presented findings of his extensive study into exercise and egg consumption.

"My interest is not in eggs," he told the producers, "and if the results had been different, I would say so too." Annoyed by what he calls the "politics" involved in the cholesterol controversy, Dr. Ismail, a noted fitness researcher, said he launched the four-month study with no outside financing so that he could not be accused of bias. "I'm only interested in the truth," he added.

Forty-eight men ranging in age from 21 to 67 were divided into exercising and non-exercising units. Half of the non-exercisers and half of the exercisers followed the extra-egg-a-day diet. The groups were also divided into young (median age 34) and old (median age 54). Those 40 or under were classified as "young" and those 41 or older as "old."

Persons in the different units were matched according to age and cholesterol levels. They were all within the normal range of cholesterol levels and had physical examinations before participating in the project. Those in the study kept daily diet sheets so that food intake could be translated into different dietary elements.

The researchers calculated the amount of calories and nutritional elements of each individual and for the experimental and control groups as wholes because cholesterol is affected by both exercise and food intake. Special eggs used in the study were provided by the Purdue University poultry science department and each egg contained a known amount of cholesterol (267.5 plus-or-minus 16.9 milligrams).

Dr. Ismail explained that the research was aimed primarily at determining (1) whether adding extra cholesterol in the form of eggs to human diets would increase the serum-cholesterol levels of the men, (2) if participation in a regular fitness program would have an effect on the cholesterol concentration of persons on an extra-egg-a-day diet, and (3) if age plays a role in how the adult male's tissue reacts to extra dietary cholesterol.

Results of Dr. Ismail's study indicated that the consumption of one extra egg a day did not affect the cholesterol level of inactive men with normal cholesterol levels. It also indicated that those who exercised, even those eating an extra-egg-a-day, had a lower level of serum cholesterol than those who did not. Dr. Ismail noted that while the cholesterol concentrations for the "young" exercising men were somewhat lower before and after the four months, the cholesterol concentrations for their "old" exercising counterparts were "significantly lower at the study period's end.

Now that he has proven that an extra-egg-a-day is not harmful to men with normal cholesterol levels, Dr. Ismail plans to study the effect of two and even three extra eggs a day to determine their effect, if any.

A CHUBBY BABY IS NOT HEALTHY

your health

My grandchild is 2 and weighs 31 pounds. I can't convince my daughter and her husband that this is not healthy even though she is chubby and adorable. — Mrs. F.M.J., N.J.

Dear Mrs. J.:

Early in the practice of medicine I learned that the "medical" wisdom of grandmothers must be respected, even by doctors. When measles, mumps and whooping cough were rampant, a doctor making a house visit knew it was measles when grandma met him at the door and said so.

And I wish your children would listen to you now. If you would like to convince them that fatness and health don't always go together, send them a copy of the book, "Growing Up Thin," written by Dr. Alvin N. Eden.

In an excellent paperback book, Dr. Eden, a practicing pediatrician, emphasizes this basic principle of good health. A fat child is destined to be a fat adolescent, with a better than even chance of ending up as a fat adult.

Dr. Eden calls his technique for weight control "Fat-proofing the child." By this method he attacks the problem of overweight at its source. He confronts parents with the importance of their role in the earliest prevention of the epidemic plague of obesity.

The hazards of fat and the psychological and social problems associated with obesity are well known to everybody. With complete understanding, parents will never again derive satisfaction from "overstuffing" a child.

I hope your children appreciate your "grandmother's wisdom."

My child needs to have eye drops three times a day. I find it impossible to do this. He's 4 and he makes such a fuss that it almost doesn't seem worthwhile.—Mrs. D. D., Ohio.

Dear Mrs. D.:

I learned a technique which seems to be exactly what you're looking for. Dr. Robert B. Taylor of New Paltz, N.Y., writes, "If a child resists having drops placed in his eyes, have him lie flat on his back and close his eyes tightly while you deposit a few drops on the closed eyelids near the nose. Have him open the eyes while still lying down and the drops will enter the eyes.

Try it. It works.

Are there any forms of treatment to prevent a child from becoming excessively tall? I am 6 feet, 4 inches tall. My wife is 6 feet tall. I want to spare our son some of the difficult problems that arise for unusually tall people — Mr. H.R.E.

Dear Mr. E.:

The prediction of adult height is difficult to make, even for children whose parents are unusually tall. Yet is is wise to give some thought to the possibility of intensive hormone studies for boys and girls who may have the tendency to be unusually tall for their age group.

Specialists in endocrinology are able to make great contributions to the serious psycho-social problems associated with being too tall or too short.

It is urged that those people who are interested in such help obtain it at an early age rather than wait until the process is difficult to control.

If the label on your washable raincoat says "Rinse well," it means it if you want to retain the fabric's water repellency. An extra rinse may be necessary if you wear and wash the coat often — there can be a detergent build-up that prevents raindrops from rolling off. A light pressing for pressable fabrics also helps to retain the shower-shedding treatment. It's worth a try before you have a drycleaner give your coat the rain-proof treatment.

When time isn't so precious after a party, rinse just-washed glassware with cold water and let it drain dry. You'll put away more sparkling glasses this way than with hot water rinsing. It's another small way to cut back on hot water use — and the cost of heating it.

Castro Visits Moscow For Brezhnev Huddle

MOSCOW (UPI) — Cuban President Fidel Castro is making a surprise visit to Moscow to compare notes with the Kremlin leadership on his month-long tour of Africa.

Just three hours after Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny returned from his own 13-day visit to southern Africa, the Cuban leader was met by the top Soviet leaders at the airport.

Communist party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev embraced him and exchanged kisses. Podgorny, Premier Alexei Kosygin and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko were also present for his arrival.

Castro's stopover in Moscow was given no advance publicity, a highly-unusual departure from past practice, even though the trip was described as unofficial. Some diplomats concluded the visit might have been hastily arranged.

The Cuban leader was expected to focus on three areas in his talks:

—Angola. Castro promised unlimited military assistance to the country's Marxist leadership, which used Soviet arms and Cuban troops to win its civil war last year.

—Relations between Ethiopia and Somalia.

Zaire Expels Cubans

KINSHASA (AP) — The Zaire government broke relations with Cuba on Monday, alleging it had uncovered evidence that Cuba was involved in the invasion of copper-rich Shaba province by Angola-based rebels.

The government radio announced the break and claimed that documents proving Cuban involvement were found on an unidentified Cuban diplomat. The radio gave no details of the document.

The broadcast said all Cuban diplomats were ordered to leave the country "in accordance with international usage." There was no indication of how many Cuban diplomats are in Zaire.

President Mobutu Sese Seko's government has repeatedly claimed that Cuba, as well as the Soviet Union and Angola, are backing the invtders in Shaba with military advisers, troops, arms and equipment.

The Cubans, Soviets and Angolans have denied any role in the invasion. Cuban President Fidel Castro told a news conference in Tanzania last month that Mobutu's accusations were an "excuse for getting more military aid from the Yankee imperialists and European neo-colonialists."

Last week, Zaire army commanders told reporters their troops had found Soviets, Cubans and Portuguese among dead "enemy" soldiers. But they offered no evidence to back the claim. The Portuguese are former colonial rules of Angola.

As many as 15,000 Soviet-backed Cuban troops fought in the Angolan civil war to help the Marxist-oriented Popular Movement beat two pro-Western nationalist factions, and thousands of Cuban troops are reported still in Angola.

Meanwhile, Zaire authorities accused Associated Press correspondent Michael Goldsmith of hostile reporting and ordered him out of the country. A government spokesman specifically cited a story by Goldsmith on Sunday, describing lukewarm response at a Kinshasa rally organized to demonstrate support for Mobutu.

U.K. Pushes Freedom Now

LONDON (UPI) — Britain is considering scrapping former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's plan for a two-year transition period in Rhodesia and proposing the drafting of an immediate independence constitution to hand over power to the black African majority, the Foreign Office said today.

A spokesman said this is one "of several ideas" Foreign Secretary David Owen will take with him on a seven-day swing through southern Africa next week.

Owen leaves here April 10 and is scheduled to return April 16 after visiting Tanzania, Mozambique, South Africa, Bostswana and Zambia.

In Cape Town he will hold separate meetings with South African Prime Minister John Vorster and Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith, the spokesman said.

Explaining the aims of Owen's trip, the spokesman said, "In Owen's view, a fresh approach should produce new ideas. Drawing up an independence constitution without first setting up an interim government is one of several ideas which may be discussed during his tour. But he is not taking out any cut-and-dried blueprint."

The proposal for a two-year interim government, which itself would draw up an independence constitution to hand over power to Rhodesia's black African majority within two years, was part of the Kissinger plan last September.

But the Geneva conference, which met in October to try to set up such a government, broke down in deadlock and no progress on the plan has been achieved since then.

U.K. to Export Oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Minister Anthony Benn of Britain said Monday his country may become a net exporter of oil by 1980, selling petroleum at prevailing world prices. Benn, speaking at a meeting of the Mid-Atlantic Club here, said Britain is investing more than $10 billion to develop its already-discovered oil fields in the North Sea.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of our nation's better players was the late Karl T. Compton, world-renowned physicist and former president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In today's deal, Dr. Compton gave a simple demonstration of the necessity of counting one's tricks before formulating his plan of attack. He also demonstrated that being a top-flight mathematician is not a prerequisite for being a good bridge player. Dr. Compton was sitting in the South seat.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

If a less-skilled player had been sitting in the South seat, he might well have attacked hearts in an attempt to build up three tricks in this suit. Had Dr. Compton done this, whichever defender won the initial heart lead would have returned a spade, driving out declarer's remaining stopper in this suit. West's spade suit would now be established. And when declarer next led another heart, West would have cashed three spade tricks.

But Dr. Compton never attacked the heart suit, for he foresaw that if he did, the defenders would establish and cash their spade suit before he got around to both establishing and cashing his heart suit. In short, he realized immediately that the defenders, in opening spades, had beaten him in the timing.

Upon viewing his combined assets, Dr. Compton perceived that there was just one hope of creating his ninth trick; and that hope rested in the 50-50 chance that West had been dealt the club king. So, after winning the opening lead with the king of spades, South first cashed five diamond tricks, discarding two hearts from dummy on the fourth and fifth diamonds.

Then came the deuce of clubs and West took his king and dummy's queen of clubs had just become declarers game-going trick. Of course, if East had possessed the club king, that card would have captured dummy's queen, and all declarer could now come to would be eight tricks. But the 50-50 hope that West had the club king was declarer's only hope. So he accepted it.

Another Mini-Disaster Strikes Fleetwood Mac Group . . .

By CHARLES YOUNG

In the latest of a series of mini-disasters for Fleetwood Mac, John McVie was picked up on a drunk driving charge after a night of heavy drinking at Carlos and Charlie's in Los Angeles. Another driver, according to McVie, ran into him, but the LAPD gave McVie a Breathalizer test and was "not amused" when it came up positive.

"They whisked me away to spend the night in the drunk tank," said McVie. "My whole life passed in front of my eyes. It's also a weird place to wake up with a hangover."

Other bad news for the band is that Stevie Nicks lost her voice and has had to take singing lessons so she doesn't lose it again. Seventeen of 23 dates on their spring tour had to be cancelled.

And then there's Lindsey Buckingham who used the time off to have four wisdom teeth removed. His blood didn't coagulate properly and he's bed-ridden with two black eyes and a great deal of pain.

An unsigned group on the Mississippi funk circuit, the Doug Mays Band, recently played the federal prison in Safford, Arizona. While eating dinner in the cafeteria, they were joined by an unexpected guest, John Ehrlichman. Mays reports the conversation ranged from Ehrlichman's novel ("Don't poison your mind with that government s—— we did") to prison conditions ("It's not too bad").

Ehrlichman reportedly cut his Spanish class to attend his first rock concert and was mouthing the words to "Jambalaya" at the well-attended event.

When the Tubes released a satire called Proud to Be an American on the flipside of Don't Touch Me There, little did they suspect the song would receive serious airplay on country and western stations.

Less did they suspect that a man claiming to be from a magazine called C & W News would present them with an award for Number One Country Band in a readers' poll on the strength of the song. Least did they suspect that the award would save them from going to jail.

"I'd never even heard of the magazine," says Fee Waybill. "This guy just showed up backstage and gave us this plaque in Sacramento. He thought we were a cross-over band. Later, when we were driving to the hotel from the concert, a cop stopped us and started giving us hell. We were drunk besides. I said, 'Hey officer, you got the wrong idea. We're the Number One Country Band of 1976,' and I showed him the plaque.

He said, "Goddam, I never even heard of you guys.'

Preparing for Next Year's Daffs

Several of the early varieties of daffodils (Narcissus) have finished their flowering period for this year.

An interesting fact about all narcissi is the habit of forming next year's flowers within the present bulb before the foliage dies down naturally in late June.

This means the quality and quantity of flowers that will appear next year depends on how the bulbs are treated as the flowers fade this year.

The first step is to prevent the expenditure of energy resources in making useless seed.

This pod, together with the faded flower, is nipped off with the thumbnail, or cut off with a pair of scissors, right below the pod, leaving the whole length of the flower stem to assist in feeding the bulb.

The second step is to replace the energy already expended in flowering and the making of potential seed.

For this we use a light dressing of fertilizer scattered among the plants, but not over the foliage because it can damage the leaves.

Bulbs require a special fertilizer mix sold as bulb fertilizer or potato fertilizer. It is usually a 4-10-10 mix, low in nitrogen and high in both phosphoric acid and potash.

The quantity to use is based on approximately one measuring teaspoonful to each bulb.

To be of any value, the plant food must reach the root area so that the feeding roots can pick it up now. This means the soil has to be reasonably wet to dissolve the salts and carry the solution to the roots.

Test the soil for dampness to the depth of the bulbs. If on the dry side, water sufficiently to get the moisture to root level. Then apply the fertilizer to the soil surface and leave it to saturate with moisture. Water again the next day to carry the solution to where the roots can reach it.

If the soil appears to be sufficiently damp, spread the fertilizer and moisten it with the hose, then water-in after 24 hours has elapsed.

The final step is to maintain watering during rainless periods for the next month, and follow with regular watering during May and early June until the foliage shows signs of maturing.

Once the foliage matures, no more water should reach the roots during the summer months. For this reason it is best to plant spring flowering bulbs in separate beds rather than among plants that have to be heavily watered in summer and early fall.

When the foliage has yellowed and dried it will come away easily without doing any damage to the bulb.

The common practice of gardeners, the tying of the green leaves into knots, is not good for the bulbs, for the foliage can only manufacture the needed food when fully exposed to sun, light, and air.

Tulips, hyacinths and Dutch bulbous iris are given the same treatment as their flowers fade, and are watered regularly until the foliage dies naturally.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct-line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

California Prison Impresses MPs

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (CP) — After a tour of the placid Metropolitan Correction Centre here, Conservative MP Erik Nielsen speculated Monday that management may be generating the violence in Canadian prisons.

Nielsen was impressed by the atmophere of the 12-level federal jail, in which about 650 prisoners are held by a full staff of about 150.

After touring 16 Canadian prisons during the winter, MPs on a special Commons subcommittee Monday began visits to five California prisons this week. Chairman Mark MacGuigan says they are looking for new ideas.

Manson cultist Lynette (Squeaky) Fromme chatted with one group of MPs as they visited the jail, where she is serving her life sentence of her attempted murder of former president Gerald Ford.

Vancouver Conservative John Reynolds said the warden told him this was the first interview that Fromme had given in jail. He taped the conversation for use on his hot-line radio show. He will resign from Parliament this spring to run the Vancouver show.

The centre was completed 20 months ago and has handled 14,000 prisoners, mostly Mexicans who enter the U.S. illegally and are shipped back across the border at nearby Tijuana.

The jail is used mainly for prisoners awaiting trial or sentenced to short terms. About 25 men serving long sentences are held here because they will be witnesses in trials involving organized crime, warden Walter Lumpkins said.

At the area where new prisoners are held, Nielsen and other MPs watched when a short woman opened a door, motioned eight husky men out, turned her back and led them away. There were no barked orders.

At McNeil Island prison in Puget Sound almost all the 1,100 men work an eight-hour day, five days a week, and many go to school at night.

They produce all the pork and poultry eaten in the prison and much of the beef. Those who are not farming work in industrial plants within the eight-foot fences, producing electronic cable for Nike-Hercules missiles, or furniture for the military.

McNeil Island is the oldest penitentiary in the U.S. federal prison system. It dates back to 1865. Its tiered cell blocks were built for 800 men and overcrowding means 10 to a cell in some ranges.

The yellow-brick buildings, surrounded by chain-link fences and the chilly waters of the sound, should be a seething mass of rebellion. But they are not.

The carrot and the stick of the compulsory work program are incentives, including wages and vacations, and as a threat those who do not work are shipped to a maxim unsecurity penitentiary.

Subcommittee chairman Mark McGuigan said the combination seems successful. He indicated the MPs will recommend to Parliament next month that a similar system be adopted.

John Reynolds said a roadblock in Canada has been opposition from private industry which regards prison production as unfair competition.

He predicted opposition from some MPs because of this but said it should be overridden in the interests of getting the Canadian system in order.

Workers can earn up to 70 cents an hour, compared to a top 11 cents an hour in Canada's prison workshops.

Part of the profits go for wages, which are based on production quotas and job performance. The rest keep the prison's operating costs to nine cents a day a prisoner—a fraction of Canada's cost.

In Canada, metal furniture will be produced at Joyceville medium-security prison in Ontario for federal departments through contracts with the supply and services department—the government's buyer. Prisoners will be paid on a profit-sharing basis similar to McNeil Island.

The Joyceville project already has run into opposition from Conservative MP Douglas Alkenbrackn who has said the competition has hurt manufacturers in his Ontario riding of Frontenac-Lennox Addington.

However, the MPs on the subcommittee see little alternative to solid work programs if the Canadian system is to be stabilized. Prisoners now are idle much of the time and complain about boredom.

The Canadian system has one staff member for every prisoner compared to McNeil Island's 1-to-3 ratio. Guards at McNeil Island made less than $60,000 in overtime last year, compared to more than $1 million in overtime bills run up at Millhaven, a federal prison in Ontario that has half as many prisoners as McNeil Island.

There are 5,000 prisoners within the U.S. system's western region but othe region has a staff of only 85. In Canada, most regions have a larger headquarters staff but nowhere near that number of prisoners.

PULLING STRINGS: Zuzana Himick gets assistance from daughter Michelle, 6, in manipulating the king and queen from a more than 50-year-old collection of puppets given her by a Winnipeg fan. Puppets Used to Get The Message Across

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Still another aspect of creative theatre using a different medium to that of other groups visiting Greater Victoria schools is about to be introduced to the children of this area.

Marionette artist Zuzana Himick has established a professional theatre troupe with the intention of bringing artistic, educational and entertaining experience to young children in their own schools. Marionette Magic Theatre already has a repertoire of plays for the primary level, kindergarten to Grade 1 and Grades 2 and 3.

Initial funding has come through an individual Canada Manpower Grant to Ms. Himick but it is her goal to make Marionette Magic a permanent facility of the city, particularly as it pertains to the pre-school and primary age group.

Marionette Magic will offer in each school performance three plays as well as the opportunity to explore a display panel showing the history and variety of puppet making. For teachers interested in crafts, a booklet on puppetry and marionettes has been prepared by the group.

It includes an excellent supplemental list of publications and suggestions for source material. The publications are available in the Victoria Public Library and the School Board professional library.

Prepared for the children is what Ms. Himick describes as "a little cookbook on puppetry — simple puppets and how to make them." She also says that specific workshops will be organized for slow learners, the average, and the gifted child, and that magnetized puppets have been created for handicapped youngsters to manipulate.

Performances start this month and will continue until the end of June. Thereafter Ms. Himick hopes to receive a Canada Works (LIP) grant in the fall.

There is no theatre without a kind of magic, Ms. Himick says, but magic must start in the mind of the beholder. As she talks she quickly convinces you that there is no child too young or too disadvantaged to experience magic if provided with the proper stimulus.

The plays she has included in the group's introductory repertoire, however, have not simply been chosen for their qualities of enchantment, she says, but to leave with the children a message — an idea, a concept, something new — that will contribute to their expanding horizon.

Czechoslovakia-born, Zuzana Himick holds a B.F.A. (Honors) degree from the University of Fine Arts at Bratislava and teacher certification from the University of Manitoba.

Now a Canadian citizen, she has done post-graduate study in theatre and the teaching of dramatic arts and before coming to Victoria two years ago, was in charge of the theatre arts section of the Winnipeg Technical and Vocational School. She has acted professionally on stage and in films, television and radio in Czechoslovakia, and has directed stage and television plays in Winnipeg.

Under her direction the company, which is registered as a member of Puppeteers of America, includes Ron George, actor-stage designer formerly with cinema-photographic industries in Toronto; Dianne Durkin, actress-designer, B.F.A. in Fine Arts from University of Toronto, and Carol Watts, costume mistress, previously with Bastion.

Others are Colleen Biddulph, actress-designer; Alan Lornie, free-lance artist and musician, Terrance Merx, free-lance artist and teacher, and Lynn Hudson, the group's secretary.

Gang of Four 'Manipulated' Party's Paper

HONG KONG (WP)—Peking Monday accused former Politburo member Yao Wen-yuan of having manipulated the party organ, The Red Flag, to glorify the "Gang of Four" and discriminate against old cadres such as Premier Chou En-lai.

The charge came in an article written by the mass criticism group of The Red Flag itself, according to New China News Agency.

Through hired writing groups, the gang of four, led by Chiang Ching, published many articles in the Red Flag to attack Chairman Mao, Premier Chou En-lai, comrade (now party chairman) Hua Kuo-feng, and several other veteran cadres, the article said.

A typical article was "Confucius — What Kind of Man Was He?" the criticism group said. "It was specifically written on Chiang Ching's order to attack Premier Chou En-lai, the criticism group said. Chiang Ching is the widow of Chairman Mao.

After Premier Chou died in January 1976, Yao Wen-yuan telephoned The Reg Flag journal, instructing them not to publish Chou's portrait, the party Central Committee's obituary and the memorial speech.

The journal was to use red (indicating happiness in Chinese) ink for its cover instead of black in mourning by Yao's order, the criticism group said.

When Chairman Mao appointed Hua Kuo-feng his successor after Premier Chou's death, Yao Wen-yuan refused to publish anything about Hua and unleashed a frantic attack on him, the article said.

Yao also disallowed reference in The Red Flag to veteran cadres as a treasured asset of the party but ordered the journal to publish articles glorifying the gang members.

The gang went so far as to forge history by publishing an article called "Class Struggle at the Time of the Chin and Han Dynasties," shamelessly lauding Empress Lu (241-180 B.C.) so as to pave the way for "empress' Chiang Ching to ascend the throne, the criticism said.

Yao deliberately undermined China's foreign trade by describing normal import as being "slavish to things foreign" and rational export as "national betrayal."

His purpose was to create confusion in which the gang could subvert the existing administration for usurpation of power, the article said.

No Solution Seen From Wind, Sun

HALIFAX (CP) — There was a lot of horn-blowing at the third Canadian national energy forum Monday by proponents of hydroelectric, nuclear and conventional energy-production methods.

Solar power, wind power and similar new technologies could not close an inevitable gap in Canadian and international energy supply-demand around 1990, several speakers said during the first day of the two-day discussion, sponsored by the World Energy Conference.

"We're biased in favor of nobody and prejudiced in favor of none," Eric Rutley, secretary general of the international executive committee of the World Energy Conference, said later in an interview.

Believers in solar and wind power get their opportunity to reply today.

Rutley and other speakers during the first day of the forum said that the alternate, renewable energy sources such as solar power and wind power simply could not make a significant dent in projected demand before the turn of the century. Energy needs in Canada to 1990 and beyond is the theme of the conference.

Gordon MacNabb, Canadian deputy federal energy minister, said his most optimistic estimate was that the contribution from such sources might fill three per cent of total demand by 1990.

Business Backs Economic Council

Formation of a Greater Victoria economic council is supported by a majority of businessmen who responded to a Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce questionnaire.

The survey also shows businessmen consider the regional economy is in a poor state.

Ideas for new enterprises heavily favored high technology and research facilities, according to Jeremy McCall, director of the chamber's economic development committee which prepared the questionnaire.

Such enterprises would be highly practical and compatible with the needs of the region, he said.

Other suggestions for the type of industry that should be solicited for greater Victoria included marine and forest-oriented industries, head offices and mobile home manufacturing.

One question asked whether businessmen knew of a business that had failed in the region in the past three years. Fifty-two per cent replied no or had no comment.

"This response regarding the success or failure of enterprises in locating in this region revealed the general lack of knowledge in this area, which is part of the problem," McCall said.

The survey also revealed that some businessmen feel the chamber could help improve the economy of the region by lobbying for a reduction of ferry rates and promoting tourism and conventions.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A preliminary hearing into charges of conspiracy to commit armed robbery, possession of a weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace, and possession of an unregistered, restricted weapon against two men got under way Monday in provincial court.

Ossie William Barnes, 28, and Patrick Norman Witter, 20, both of 252 Gorge Road East, are facing the three charges after being picked up March 15 by Saanich police at the Shelbourne shopping centre.

A 19-year-old Saanich youth, charged with two counts of indecent assault in connection with incidents Saturday at a Saanich park, was denied bail by Judge Harold Alder and remanded in custody until Tuesday.

John Edward Caldwell was charged in connection with the weekend incidents. Defence lawyer Robert Johnston, who asked for a no-publication order for the bail hearing, asked for the case to be remanded until next Tuesday for election of trial method.

May 20 has been set as the preliminary hearing date for charges of unlawful confinement and possession of a dangerous weapon against 30 year-old Ronald Gordon Widdifield, of 314 Goldstream.

Defence lawyer David Lisson elected trial by judge without jury on the two Sidney charges as well as on two counts of rape and one count of kidnapping in connection with March 19-21 incidents at Ladysmith.

Widdifield was remanded until April 14 to appear in Ladysmith provincial court to fix a date for preliminary hearing on those charges.

Wesley James Kennedy, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to the April 2 offence, which occurred at the Tunnel News, 644 Yates.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Kennedy told police juveniles committed the break-in during which the cash box was taken. Mulligan also read out Kennedy's lengthy juvenile record, mainly for breaking and entering, and said Kennedy pleaded guilty March 24 — 10 days after his 17th birthday — — of possession of marijuana.

A pre-sentence report was ordered at that time for April 15 and Kennedy will be sentenced at that time on both charges.

Mark Edward Bennett, 27, of 2551 Blackwood, received concurrent, 15-day sentences after changing his pleas to guilty on charges of impaired driving and assaulting a peace officer.

Bennett had pleaded not guilty to the two charges plus two more counts of assaulting a peace officer and one count of refusing a breath test demand Dec. 12.

After the change of pleas by defence lawyer Robert Monaghan, Mulligan applied for stays of proceeding on the other charges, which Alder granted.

Bennett also pleaded not guilty to a charge of theft by conversion of a car from Host Rent-A-Car, 677 Humboldt, and had a trial date of June 30 set.

A 24-year-old man received the minimum fine of $50 for having a blood-alcohol content over .08 after the judge heard the special circumstances.

Michael Bruce Price, who pleaded guilty, was stopped Feb. 18 by Saanich police after they first noticed him driving at Interurban and Burnside. A breath test produced a .13 reading.

Diane Somers, a University of Victoria law student representing Price, explained that her client was accepted into the Canadian armed forces but a fine of more than $50 would hold up his enlistment for six months, which would be crucial because applicants 25 years of age or more are not accepted.

Alder, in handing out the small fine, said he did not like being pressured into the decision but said he took the blood-alcohol content reading into consideration.

UBCM Approves New Bill

VERNON (CP) — The executive of the Union of B.C. Municipalities has approved in principle a government bill aimed at providing municipalities with more power in directing development within their boundaries.

Mayor Pat Duke of Lumby, president of the UBCM, said today the executive met during the weekend with Housing and Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis. Following the meeting, Duke said, the UBCM executive approved Bill 42 in principle.

The bill sets out broader powers over subdivisions for municipalities and regional districts that have registered community plans. He said the bill, when finally passed by the legislature, could help speed development in some community.

Duke says it will take about a year to phase in the broader powers.

Probation Term For City Pair

Two Victoria men were given suspended sentences Monday in county court and placed on probation for one year.

Edwin Robert Lynn, 23, and Imre Medgyes, 22, pleaded guilty to possession of stereo equipment July 13 worth more than $200 knowing it to have been obtained by theft.

Co-Op Supermarket Separate Entity

Peninsula Consumer Services Co-op general manager Bud Whitfield said Monday that the co-op supermarket opening next month in Central Saanich is solely a venture of his organization.

In last Friday's Times it was reported that the new grocery outlet was being opened by the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union.

Whitfield said it was the credit union's general membership that pointed out the need for the supermarket, but the consumer services co-op is operating as a separate entity in setting up the non-profit outlet.

He added that many credit union members have paid the $100 fee required to take part in the enterprise, but stressed that "membership is open to all and anyone, you don't have to join the credit union to get use of the store."

Whitfield also said that the co-op stores now operating in Campbell River, Nanaimo and Duncan are similar to the one planned by consumer services but are run by different organizations.

He said the store will be able to handle some 2,000 member families, and could give an average-sized family a saving of between $200 and $350 a year on grocery bills.

$2,000 Reward For Alley Cat

VANCOUVER — Luke is an average mongrel cat, probably conceived in a back alley about three years ago.

Luke is worth $2,000 to Davis.

Luke "is very, very dear to me; that's all there is to it," says Davis, a second-hand book dealer who has spent about $400 to advertise the $2,000 reward offer.

"He's just a plain old alley cat. I've had him since he was a kitten. He'll be three years old in May."

Luke also has some claws missing from front feet, the ad notes.

The missing claws — two from one paw and three from the other, the result of a skirmish with a car two years ago — complicates matters for triflers who might pick up a ringer in an effort to get the reward.

Margaret's Pix Do The Trick

"She seems to know quite a bit about photography and seems to do a pretty good job," Dominis said.

Mrs. Trudeau's first photographic assignment for People magazine was delivered last week and will be published shortly. Dominis said she has no other assignments pending.

"A lot of our people work on spec," he said. "As of now, she has no assignment with us. She probably will get another in the future but she has nothing with us at the moment."

He said he had heard, from sources other than Mrs. Trudeau, that she may undertake a trip to Paris shortly on her own. "If she comes up with a good story or two — not that we have this in mind — we probably would give her an assignment," he added.

Dominis suggested that Mrs. Trudeau, because of her status as the wife of the Canadian prime minister, may be in a position to meet and photograph people who would make good picture copy.

Governor Dixy Lee Ray said Monday she will drive British Columbia's Royal Hudson steam train from East Olympia to Tacoma next Monday.

She'll board at 10:45 a.m. and take over the controls on the way to Tacoma. At her hometown, she'll be escorted through three exhibit cars by Grace McCarthy.

McCarthy is on a tour of the northwest, using the vintage train and exhibits to promote B.C.'s tourist trade.

Ray, as governor, already has piloted a hydrofoil on Puget Sound and an Atlantic Richfield tanker through Rosario Strait. What next?

Beatles Blocking Vintage Album

LONDON — The Beatles and their recording firm Apple Corp. sought a court injunction today to stop the release of recording of their 1962 night club act when they were unknowns working for a few pounds a night in West Germany.

The two-record album is titled The Beatles Live at the Hamburg Star Club 1962.

Their show there was taped by King Size Taylor, a friend who had his own band at the time and is now a butcher in Southport, near Liverpool, the Beatles' hometown.

Taylor did nothing with the tape until 1973, when he got together with Paul Murphy of the Lingasong company and Allan Williams, the Beatles' first manager, to produce the album.

It is scheduled to go on sale Thursday in Germany, next month in Britain and later in the United States.

"Lingasong do not have the consent of the Beatles to release this record," a spokesman for Apple said.

"It is an infringement of rights."

TEMPERATURE RECORDS FALL IN B.C.

Lytton had 25 degrees Celsius and was the hottest spot in Canada while Revelstoke had a high of 20 and Prince George and Fort St. John recorded highs of 19 degrees.

In Victoria, the high was 13.7 at the airport and 14.2 at Gonzales, well below the previous record of 19.4 set on April 4, 1966.

Today's Victoria high could hit the 19-degree mark, the weatherman said, because of a ridge of high pressure settled over the coast.

Things should cool down a bit by Friday with overcast and possibly some showers a that time.

No Deal For Quebec —Poll

TORONTO (CP) — Most Canadians who responded to a readers' survey by The Canadian magazine are opposed to negotiating special political and economic agreements with Quebec in an attempt to prevent separation, the weekly publication says.

Most of the 102,152 Canadians who responded also are opposed to promoting and financing more bilingualism programs across the country in an attempt to prevent separation, say results to be published in the April 29 edition.

The magazine, distributed to about two million readers through weekend editions of newspapers, asked readers Jan. 15 to fill in a six-part questionnaire and mail it to the magazine.

The magazine expected about 30,000 replies and says it was overwhelmed by the response. About 3,000 readers also sent letters with additional comments on the poll.

The magazine says its poll is not a scientific sampling of what Canadians believe because few French-Canadians read The Canadian and it is not distributed in the Atlantic region.

It commissioned a Gallup poll from the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion to ask the same questions as the reader's poll.

Almost 80 per cent of readers who responded opposed Canada negotiating special agreements with Quebec to prevent separation. Gallup poll results had 54.2 per cent of English-speaking respondents opposing negotiations while 66.9 per cent of French-Canadians supported such deals.

Canadians in both surveys were split on the question of whether Canada should hold a national vote on Quebec independence.

Seventy-seven per cent of readers opposed more bilingualism programs, compared with 64.1 per cent of English-Canadians in the Gallup poll. Fifty-six per cent of francophones in the Gallup poll supported more programs.

OTTAWA PUSHING HIKE

8-Cent-a-Gallon Boost for Gas?

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is expected to look for an oil price increase of up to eight cents a gallon in the annual pricing talks with the provinces that open here Wednesday.

A final decision on the federal position was to be made at a cabinet meeting today, but sources say Ottawa likely will seek a price increase of close to $2 a barrel.

An increase of that amount on the price of crude oil at the wellhead would add about eight cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline or home-heating fuel.

Asked about the price increases Monday, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said he did not want to negotiate in public.

But in speeches this year, the minister has said an increase of at least $1.25 a barrell would be needed just to keep pace with changes in the world price. He also said that an increase of "better than $2" could be imposed without taking the domestic price above U.S. levels.

Sources said Monday the federal position currently leans towards the upper end of that scale, but it will need ratification by the cabinet today before it is presented to the federal-provincial conference.

Federal energy department officials say they expect to see the same breakdown between provinces as to whether prices should increase.

Alberta will argue for a significant move towards world oil prices of more than $13 a barrel.

But Ontario, as it has for the last two years, will argue against large price increases. Provincial Energy Minister James Taylor already has said he feels a price increase will create more unemployment, tdd to inflation and hurt the country's competitiveness in world markets.

LEICHTENSTEIN . . . ALL'S FINE

VADUZ, Leichtenstein (UPI) — This tiny principality of 23,700 persons and 62 square miles said Monday it is doing all right economically despite troubles elsewhere in the world.

For instance, unemployment dropped in 1976 from 58 to 17 people and the number of partially unemployed declined from 139 to 1, the State Bank said. There were 12 job opportunities.

Gross national product last year totaled $264 million, which meant a per capita income of $10,560.

Not Enough Cash to Cut Jobless

OTTAWA (CP) — The government simply does not have enough money to significantly reduce unemployment across the country, Manpower Minister Bud Cullen said Monday.

Even to reduce the unemployment rate to four or five per cent "would cost literally billions."

Nearly a million Canadians are unemployed.

"Nobody, I am sure, would suggest that these billions should be found by cutting out other federal programs which are so important to our economic and social well being," Cullen said.

Cullen was speaking during Commons debate on the budget presented last week which contained an additional $100 million for make-work programs, bringing the total allocated this year to $458 million.

The government's top priority is to help people find work but "our labor force grows faster than the number of job opportunities the economy is generating." He cited the basic problem as a continual addition of women and young people to the labor market.

"It would indeed be wonderful if we could abolish unemployment with one blow," said Cullen.

Manpower officials plan to approve 3,150 government make-work projects — Canada works and Young Canada works — at a cost of about $110 million during the first stage of the program, which started Monday and ends next March. The total program is expected to create about 77,110 jobs, he said.

Butter Prices Rise 10 Cents

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan announced a new federal policy Monday that will result in an increase for consumers of 10 cents-a-pound for butter and cost taxpayers an additional $200 million in subsidies to farmers.

Whelan said the "modest increase" for butter was justified in order to provide Canada's 80,000 dairymen with a better standard of living.

The new policy, effective last Friday, governs farmers who produce the milk used to make skim milk powder, butter and cheese.

Ottawa will spend a record $477 million to subsidize the dairy industry in 1977-78. The new policy represents a major initiative by the government to bail out the financially-troubled industry.

The announcement was welcomed in the Commons by spokesmen for all parties. The policy is in sharp contrast to last year's when the surplus-burdened farmers were ordered to cut production by 18 per cent.

A debt of $152 million as of March 31, accumulated by the industry due to export losses suffered during the last 12 months, is to be written off by the federal government.

Whelan denied suggestions outside the Commons that cabinet had approved the $200 million increase in an effort to buy back separatist votes in Quebec, where about 60 per cent of the country's total production originates.

But the agriculture minister said political conditions were always a factor when cabinet approved federal spending plans.

"Sometimes you have to face reality," Whelan said.

However, he insisted the subsidies were boosted to assist financially-strapped farmers in all provinces.

Quebec dairymen were among the most vocal opponents of last year's policy and led an unruly Parliament Hill demonstration last June where Whelan was pelted with milk and butter.

Whelan said the new policy will hold the line of total production at 105.6 million hundredweight of industrial milk. And Ottawa will continue to support the dairymen directly with a subsidy of $2.66 a hundred-weight unchanged from last year.

Payment for skim milk powder will rise two cent a pound to 70 cents.

To help offset the export losses, producers of fluid milk, the milk sold on the store shelf, will be assessed a levy of 25 cents a hundredweight. The fluid producers are controlled by the provinces while industrial shippers are regulated by Ottawa.

Plane Crash Kills 68 As Storms Rake South

Times News Services

Savage spring storms battered the U.S. Monday night and early today, spawning tornadoes that virtually wiped out whole communities claiming 102 lives and unleashing a hailstorm that may have caused an airliner to crash.

Southern Airways DC-9, its jets apparently clogged by violent hail that smashed windows in the plane, glided down onto a two-lane highway, crushing cars and buildings before exploding in a rain of fire, metal and victims.

Sixty-eight persons including four on the ground died and 27 others were injured.

With its engines deadened in the sudden and fierce hail and lightening storm, the plane crashed on Georgia Highway 92, the main street of the town of 1,400.

Pilot William McKenzie, 54, had tried to land the jet with a wing span of 90 feet on a two-lane road only 22 feet wide.

Local residents who witnessed the crash said the pilot would have made it but for a lone telephone pole standing near a gas station.

McKenzie and his first officer, Lyman Keele, 33, were both reported killed in the crash.

A survivor said the 81 passengers and four crew members were told they were going to crash about four minutes before the plane struck.

"It was an apparently severe thunderstorm . . . The hail really got bad . . . Lightning struck the left wing tip . . . I believe the hail being ingested in the engine is what really brought it down," said Don Foster, a licensed pilot from Decatur, Ala., and a passenger.

National Guardsmen were pressed into flood duty in Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia. Scores of persons were missing in Wise County, Va., but civil defence officials said it was impossible to say how many found refuge from high waters and how many might have drowned.

A tornado killed 21 persons in north Alabama Monday, another twister claimed 1 life in Georgia, floods killed 4 persons in Kentucky, 4 in West Virginia, 2 in Virginia and 1 in Tennessee. One traffic death in Tennessee also was blamed on the weather.

Eighteen of the tornado victims died and nearly 100 persons were injured in devastated Smithfield Estates, in the Birmingham, Ala., area.

Gas Pipe Offer To Indians

WASHINGTON (CP) — A confidential U.S. government document presented today to a House of Representatives sub-comittee says the Arctic Gas consortium has offered to "make a settlement" of native claims along the route of a proposed gas pipeline in northern Canada.

The document, a cable from U.S. Ambassador Tom Enders in Ottawa, also quotes the ambassador as saying Canadian government agencies dealing with the pipeline question "are indeed moving very slowly."

Native land claims are under negotiation between the federal government and various native groups who say they will not accept pipeline construction until affer their claims are settled.

Harold Runnnels (Dem.—N.M.) presented the cable, which summarizes a Sept. 28 conversation between the U.S. ambassador and two executives of Columbia Gas Transmission Corp., a consortium member.

The cable says: "Meeting ended with discussion of Arctic Gas offer to make a settlement of native claims along pipeline route. Ambassador Clarke and Orlofsky concluded that although this is a necessary and helpful gesture it would not by itself resolve the difficult claims issue.

The two executives were B. J. Clarke, senior vice-president of Columbia, and Cy Orlofsky, whose title was not given.

Runnels said it should be made known whether U.S. gas consumers will ultimately pay what could be a huge cost of the possible settlement of Canadian land claims.

Quebec Moving Backwards: PM

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he hopes the Quebec government will change some of the proposals suggested in a policy paper on the use of French and English in the province.

Trudeau said in the Commons that he agrees with a suggestion by Opposiion Leader Joe Clark that the proposed legislation, which grants supremacy to the French language, challenges the federal Official Languages Act, which places English and French on an equal level.

Trudeau said he feared the Quebec government is taking "retrogressive rather than progressive" steps in the cultural development of Quebec.

While the prime minister said he sympathized with the desires of the Quebec government to stimulate the cultural growth of Quebecers, he did not want the provincial government to create a unilingual French Quebec with a unilingual English Canada the spin-off.

Trudeau said he did not plan to give a formal address to Parliament on the Quebec policy paper, although he is willing to answer questions on it and cabinet ministers were free to comment.

He emphasized that the paper was prepared for discussion and that it could be changed before being made law.

Rent-Curb Phase-Out Hint

Rent controls will probably be phased out on all but low-cost housing by the year's end, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Monday.

Mair said the government hopes to withdraw its controls when the law of supply and demand begins to effectively hold rent increases down.

"When the vacancy rate permits, we hope to de-control," said the minister.

Last week the government announced that the maximum rent increase ceiling will be lowered to seven per cent from 10.6 per cent on May 1.

Mair said that a decision on rent controls would come from the cabinet only after further study of the situation, but he expected the controls will become unnecessary as vacancy rates rise, driving rents down.

The minister added, however, that the controls could remain in place on low-cost rental housing where the supply is less than the demand.

2,4-D Use Approved in Okanagan Lake

The provincial government is going to go ahead with the use of the controversial herbicide 2,4-D to control Eurasian Water Milfoil in the Okanagan Lake system.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Monday that the use of the chemical herbicide is recommended in a report by a special three-man committee set up to study the weed contamination problem.

Nielsen tabled the report in the legislature Monday, and said its recommendations would form the basis for the provincial program to control the weed.

The minister told a news conference the weed control program will be launched in 1977 using four methods of control — mechanical, hydraulic, biological and chemical.

He said a full scale integrated control plan would be in operation by 1978, lasting until 1980.

Bob Langford, fresh water biologist and consultant for Saanich, the Capital region and the federal government, said today it is not the Eurasian Water Milfoil which is causing weed problems in local lakes but two or three natural varieties.

The milfoil "spreads like wildfire" and would make "an awful damn mess" if it turned up in lakes here, he said.

Although the herbicide 2,4-D is "controversial," Langford said he does not know enough about it to call it dangerous. He said he thinks it may be warranted because of the onslought of the milfoil in the Okanagan.

Nielsen said that after the three full years of control, if the problem is not contained, a complete reassessment of the scheme would be in order.

The report containing the recommendations was the second given Nielsen by the committee, which was set up by the minister in October, 1976.

The first report, tabled in early February, dealt with preventative and mechanical methods of controlling milfoil.

Nielsen said the final report is not yet ready and will contain no new recommendations, being just a compilation of the first two.

In the report tabled Monday, the committee said it could find no evidence of adverse long-term effects from the use of recommended dosages of herbicides over fairly long periods of time when used in water.

He said the implementation in any particular area would involve consultation with local

This Lady Wants Date Badly

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Now and again a seagull salutes her with a lonely cry, or the wind, as if mindful of her plight, hums softly through her rigging.

Every seaman who has sailed any length of time in coastal waters knows her. She's the W. J. Stewart, the trim 235-foot hydrographic vessel once a familiar sight in the straits, inlets and bays of the British Columbia coast. She was named after a dominion hydrographer.

And they also know her worth as one of the finest vessels of her kind to ply coastal waters between Washington and Alsaska.

Since September, 1975, the W. J. Stewart has not been used for hydrographic surveys. She has been docked at Patricia Bay — temporarily laid up under the federal government's austerity program.

Meantime, she is being put to some use. In June last year the oceanographic institute's ship division moved its offices aboard.

The ship is in prime running order — her engines and equipment greased, her brass polished, her decks painted and kept in tip-top shape waiting for the day she is ordered to sea.

But will she ever put out to sea again?

This question is now being asked by the men who have served her.

"No decision has yet been made to take her out of service permanently, but as time goes by the chances of the Stewart sailing again grows less and less," he said.

Like all the ship's former officers, Stewart would hate to see the vessel sold or scrapped, but the problem is she is expensive to operate.

He was the first seaman employed on the Stewart after she arrived from the East Coast, via the Panama Canal, to begin her work as a hydrographic vessel in 1932.

She was built by the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. of Ontario.

He became her master in 1968-69, relinquishing his command following his appointment to his present position of assistant regional marine superintendent.

Green's attachment to the vessel is not based on sentiment but on the ship's performance and seaworthiness.

"She is one of the last of her kind," he said, pointing out that she is powered by a triple expansion steam engine, a type no longer used on modern vessels.

"Engines of this type are not costly to maintain."

"She has an excellently designed hull," he added. "That's what makes her so seaworthy. She is steady. I've taken her through many storms. Ah, I know her well."

Green also pointed out that she had a rivetted hull. Today's ship's plates are welded.

"Apart from that she is comfortable," he said. "She is finished with teak and maple. Today they use arborite—use as little wood as possible.

Green said the W. J. Stewart has not only weathered some of the severest storms on the coast but survived a sinking that would have finished most ships.

On June 11, 1944, at 2 p.m., she foundered on Ripple Rock in Seymour Narrows. Miraculously, her boilers didn't explode when the engine room filled with water.

She was safely beached 20 minutes later at nearby Plumber Bay and back in service in 1945 after undergoing repairs at Yarrows Ltd.

Deep Trouble

The W. J. Stewart survived a sinking after hitting infamous Ripple Rock in Seymour Narrows in June, 1944. Her boosters say most ships never would have sailed again but she was repaired at Yarrows and carried on.

Wave of Charges Laid In Base Drug Attack

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Maritime Command Pacific has been hit by a wave of marijuana offences with 25 summary trials in the past month.

The charges were revealed today by Rear-Admiral Collier, who said the marijuana use involves young seamen and soldiers who have been in the service 18 months and less.

An armed forces spokesman said further drug charges will be laid against a "substantial number" of CFB Esquimalt personnel.

The names of those to be charged are being withheld until the charges are laid.

"We have had a number of summary trials, about 25 in the last month," Collier said.

COLLIER
. . . problems for command

"Every month we have a few, unfortunately."

Summary trials are those in which the commanding officers of the units administer the trials.

Collier said the incidents now being investigated may be dealt with either at summary trials or at the higher level of courts martial.

In July, 1975, nine armed forces personnel, all members of the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry, were court martialed after being found guilty of drug charges.

Collier said the command has an ongoing program on drug and alcohol abuse, designed to reduce the problem.

The admiral said the drug problem "comes in waves." The program is designed to include the families of men with either drug or alcohol problems.

"Our program is to try and teach the kids," he said. "But it is slow in working and comes after the fact, unfortunately."

He said 90 per cent are young, fairly new recruits with very few older married men involved.

The first indication of the drug crackdown came today in a telephone call to the Times.

The anonymous caller, who identified himself only as a seaman, said armed forces personnel are unhappy about being "hassled" in the drug investigation.

The caller said a number of those who have already been charged did not have marijuana in their possession and appear to have been convicted on hearsay evidence.

"In the forces you're guilty until proven innocent," the caller said.

TOWN TALK

Perhaps Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf has the answer.

In a press release last week, Bawlf was quoted as giving an assurance that work on removing the derelict finger wharf would "cause no impedance to the annual Swiftsure gathering within the Inner Harbor."

According to our Concise Oxford, impedance is "total virtual resistance of electric current to alternating curent, arising from the resistance and reactance of the conductor."

If you're looking for a word that means hindrance or obstruction, Sam, try "impediment." Forget impedance. No impudence intended.

The exception came this weekend when she received a buss on the cheek in public from Rear-Admiral Dan Mainguy.

It happened in Moncton, N.B., at the annual dinner of the Navy League of Canada. The kiss came after Mainguy had presented her with a Canadian armed forces scroll in recognition of the "meritorious manner" in which she supports the sea and the navy.

Reports have it the admiral also was seen to blush.

Dufour is the first woman to receive the award — the scroll, that is — and also the first woman national vice-president the league has had since its inception 82 years ago.

Last week Dr. William E. J. Ekins of 1354 Beach Drive marked his 100th birthday and it's interesting to look at an earlier summary he wrote to see how far medicine has travelled.

When he was at medical school in Toronto at the turn of the century, most students rented a room for 75 cents to $1.50 a week and 21 meal tickets in almost any restaurant went for $1.50 to $2.

Practising on the Prairies in the first decade of this century, he recalls an 80-mile round trip by horse and buggy to a confinement case between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m.

Crossing a flooding river, he remembers his buggy floating and the horses having to swim to make it.

Dear Alisa: I have this problem of butting into other people's business. Can you help me?

How do we know? Because her proud grandfather, John Murray, assistant executive director at Victoria General Hospital, showed us this fat pile of clippings.

And how did Alisa handle that frank question above? She wrote: ". . . instead of just butting in, ask if you can add something. If they say yes, then fine. If they say no, then just say okay and walk away. But don't worry because it is good to be interested in people."

In our last Town Talk column—it ran on April Fool's Day you'll recall—we had a brief story mentioning that city archivist Ainslie Helmcken had been designated a heritage structure.

Helmcken himself broke up.

But he had hysterics when a sweet little old lady (she'll remain nameless to spare her embarrassment) rang him up to offer her profuse congratulations on the honor.

Helmcken, apparently, was helpless for hours.

Yes Or No? Mr. Davis

Saanich council will write Transport Minister Jack Davis demanding a straight answer on whether the Brentwood-Mill Bay ferry will be taken out of service.

The decision was made Monday after council received what Ald. John Mika termed "a very circumspect civil service answer" to a letter sent two weeks ago.

Mika said the government should "Not give us a political answer but gave us a direct answer as to whether or not the Mill Bay service will continue."

In his reply, Charles Gallagher, general manager of the B.C. Ferries Corporation, reminded council the ferry service was originally initiated to compensate for the poor state of the Malahat Highway.

"The matter that the board of directors have to be concerned with is whether, on a route where there is a road alternative, it is sensible to expand large capital sums (for dock reconstruction) which could be better utilized to improve facilities on routes where there are no road alternatives," Gallagher wrote.

Ald. Ian Cass said he was opposed to "the old empty bottomless pit of putting more money into roads."

Bricklayers Set Up Picket Lines

Bricklayers recently certified at Beechwood Construction Ltd. have set up picket lines at two Victoria building sites in a move to force a first contract with the company.

The Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union, Local 1, posted pickets early Monday morning at a Gorge Road East construction site, and expanded their lines today to a second Beechwood project on Quadra, north of McKenzie.

The union won certification after a hearing before the Labor Relations Board early in March.

Beechwood is a member of the Independent Contractors and Businessmen's Association, an organization supporting the right-to-work movement.

Union representative Ben Fleming said the decision to strike came after a series of meetings failed to make any progress towards a first settlement.

Fleming said the union wants the standard agreement that just about every other construction company has with bricklayers.

Asked if the union views the dispute as a showdown with right-to-work factions in the city, Fleming said, "No, but some people on the other side might think so . . . we view this as just another company."

Labor generally regards the right-to-work movement as a union-breaking weapon used by employers to keep wages low.

Keeling Quits Saanich

Frank Keeling—the administrative assistant to Saanich Mayor Ed Lum—today quit his $22,500 a year job.

Keeling threatened to resign last week unless he was given a more responsible management post.

His departure comes in the wake of a closed-door council meeting Monday that saw aldermen refuse to cnfirm Keel-Keeling in his post.

It was decided at the meeting that council's personnel committee evaluate the need for his position.
derman refuse to confirm year ago.

Last week he complained he had been given "joe jobs" for the most part since being hired and added: "I'm not prepared to continue in this role."

Acting mayor Sandy Noel said after Monday's meeting: "We don't accept threats."

Pheasant Shoot Blocked

North Saanich council voted narrowly Monday night to reverse an earlier decision and withdraw approval of a pheasant shooting project on the farm of George Alyard.

Mayor Paul Grieve said today the subject produced considerable debate and a number of viewpoints but in the end there was a 4-3 vote against allowing the pheasant shoot.

Ald. Wilf Price, who earlier supported the project, said he had numerous calls opposing it and saw no reason why it had to go ahead now, the mayor said. It was Price's vote which constituted the swing.

In February, council voted 4-3 to approve an application from former alderman Alyard to allow shooting of pheasant from August to March within the boundaries of his 300-acre Brackenhurst farm.

At that time Grieve voted against the application for what he said were other than emotional reasons. He said the municipality's firearms bylaw prohibits firing of any guns in North Saanich and he doesn't believe it should be changed for one applicant.

Also opposing the move in February and voting to rescind it Monday night were aldermen Eric Sherwood and John Lapham.

Favoring it in February and again Monday night were aldermen George Westwood, Robert Thompson and Owen Philp.

Shortly after the issue came to light Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf ordered a review of pheasant shooting programs in the province and said no new licences permitting such hunts would be issued until his study is completed. There has been no word from Bawlf on the subject, but he stressed at the time the moratorium was not permanent.

Alyard said at the time he was surprised by Bawlf's move because pheasant shooting programs had been in existence for some time, notably in the Fraser Valley for several years.

Price's response to Bawlf's temporary ban was: "Pretty soon they'll want us all to be vegetarians."

He said killing pheasants was like killing chickens except that "chickens aren't flying when you kill them."

$2,000 Reward For Alley Cat

VANCOUVER — Luke is an average mongrel cat, probably conceived in a back alley about three years ago.

But there's nothing average about the reward Luke's owner, Frank Davis, 37, is offering for the return of his missing tabby.

Luke is worth $2,000 to Davis.

Luke "is very, very dear to me; that's all there is to it," says Davis, a second-hand book dealer who has spent about $400 to advertise the $2,000 reward offer.

"He's just a plain old alley cat. I've had him since he was a kitten. He'll be three years old in May."

Luke also has some claws missing from front feet, the ad notes.

The missing claws — two from one paw and three from the other, the result of a skirmish with a car two years ago — complicates matters for triflers who might pick up a ringer in an effort to get the reward.

Margaret's Pix Do The Trick

"She seems to know quite a bit about photography and seems to do a pretty good job," Dominis said.

Mrs. Trudeau's first photographic assignment for People magazine was delivered last week and will be published shortly. Dominis said she has no other assignments pending.

"A lot of our people work on spec," he said. "As of now, she has no assignment with us. She probably will get another in the future but she has nothing with us at the moment."

He said he had heard, from sources other than Mrs. Trudeau, that she may undertake a trip to Paris shortly on her own. "If she comes up with a good story or two — not that we have this in mind — we probably would give her an assignment," he added.

Dominis suggested that Mrs. Truman, because of her status as the wife of the Canadian prime minister, may be in a position to meet and photograph people who would make good picture copy.

DIXY DOES IT AGAIN

OLYMPIA — First a hydrofoil, then an oil supertanker. Now it's a train.

Governor Dixy Lee Ray said Monday she will drive British Columbia's Royal Hudson steam train from East Olympia to Tacoma next Monday.

She'll board at 10:45 a.m. and take over the controls on the way to Tacoma. At her hometown, she'll be escorted through three exhibit cars by Grace McCarthy.

McCarthy is on a tour of the northwest, using the vintage train and exhibits to promote B.C.'s tourist trade.

Ray, as governor, already has piloted a hydrofoil on Puget Sound and an Atlantic Richfield tanker through Rosario Strait. What next?

Beatles Blocking Vintage Album

LONDON — The Beatles and their recording firm Apple Corp. sought a court injunction today to stop the release of recording of their 1962 night club act when they were unknowns working for a few pounds a night in West Germany.

The two-record album is titled The Beatles Live at the Hamburg Star Club 1962.

Their show there was taped by King Size Taylor, a friend who had his own band at the time and is now a butcher in Southport, near Liverpool, the Beatles' hometown.

Taylor did nothing with the tape until 1973, when he got together with Paul Murphy of the Lingasong company and Allan Williams, the Beatles' first manager, to produce the album.

It is scheduled to go on sale Thursday in Germany, next month in Britain and later in the United States.

"Lingasong do not have the consent of the Beatles to release this record," a spokesman for Apple said.

"It is an infringement of rights."

The Beatles broke up 5½ years ago but all four members of the group — John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr — are still associated with Apple.
